STATE REVEALS
SECRETS IN SLOT
MACHINE GRAFT

Boodle and Politics,
Is Trial Refrain.

Nickels and quarters, jingling through many hundreds of slot machines all over the city, wound up in the guilty pockets of politicians, police officials, and gangsters, if the story is true that was related yesterday by Assistant State's Attorney Henry Ayres to a jury in the Criminal court of Judge John P. McGoorty.

Twenty-one defendants are on trial, including Dr. William H. Reid, political leader in the Thompson camp, and six captains of police who have been suspended pending the outcome of this trial.

The captains are Patrick J. Collins, Dennis M. Malloy, Richard P. Gill, Michael Tobin, Hugh McCarthy, and Michael Delaney.

State's Case Kept Secret.

Contrary to the usual procedure in criminal prosecutions in Cook county, which is to let every one know all about the charges as developments turn up, this case has been shrouded in secrecy, and yesterday was the first time that the details of the so-called slot machine syndicate conspiracy have been revealed. The secrecy was carried so far that the defense lawyers complained that they hadn't the slightest idea what the case was all about, and consequently hadn't been able to prepare a good defense.

Quite a business was worked up by the slot machine syndicate, said Prosecutors Ayers in his opening statement.

Promoters, collectors, bookkeepers, bookmen, and others in a sizable staff were employed to run the business.

Slot Machines Retrieved.

Slot machines seized in raids by cap-tales who were not involved in the scheme were stored for safekeeping in the basement of the city hall and in a south side police station, Mr. Ayers said. But far from being kept safe, they all were trundled into trucks and moved back to the syndicate's quarters, it was charged.

Those in the basement of the city hall were moved out in the quiet early morning hours, said Mr. Ayers, a certainty note or two having served for all to glide them past the police custodians.

Oliver's Receipts Listed.

The following figures show Oliver's alleged receipts and the amount of unpaid tax with which he is charged:

Year — Net receipts. Tax owed.

1927 ..... 106,041.13 16,678.58
1928 ..... 111,000.17 15,000.00
Total ..... $272,516.88 $41,678.58

*Appreciates.

The apparent discrepancy in the 1928 tax owed, with a larger income than in 1927 calling for a smaller tax, is due, according to Dwight Green, solicitor for the department of internal revenue who conducted much of the investigation, to allowances granted to Oliver in computing the tax.

Charge Failure to Report.

The first indictment, containing three counts, charges Oliver with failure to file a schedule on his income for the three years. The second is for failure to supply information to the government relative to his income for 1927. The third and fourth charge him with "a willful attempt to defeat and evade paying income tax for 1927." The difference in the last two indictments is largely one of language.

Conviction on either of the first two indictments carries a penalty of one year in jail, a fine of $1,000, or both.

The last two, however, are classed as felonies and are punishable by five years in prison and each a fine of $10,000, or both.

Rockola Is Chief Witness.

It appeared from Mr. Ayers' opening talk that the state's chief witness, the witness who will tell all about the bribery alleged to have been practiced, is David C. Rockola.

The state is known to have felt regulation over the prospective testimony of Rockola, who was described by Prosecutor Ayers as the chief aid of High Pockets O'Brien. Rockola, with other prosecution witnesses, up to a certain time had been the willing tool of the state, accepting the food, lodgings, and other hospitality extended through Mr. Ayers. Then suddenly a writ of habeas corpus was obtained in Rockola's behalf and to the surprise of the prosecutors Rockola insisted on being released from the state's hospital.

He was freed, and in public statements admitted having made many selections for O'Brien, but denied ever having paid any bribes.

However, Mr. Ayers yesterday exhibited no doubts of Rockola's steadfastness in the state's behalf and confidently he pictured him carrying out the nefarious bribes and corruptions of High Pockets O'Brien.

High Pockets Is a Fugitive.

O'Brien, described by the state as the higher-up who made all arrangements with the powers of the Thompson administration on behalf of his slot machine syndicate, has never been apprehended. He is sojourning in foreign climes, spending his slot machine fortune, the state reported.

Mike O'Donnell, who is coming to be known as the longest lived of the slot runners, promised to live on the

3 Billions More Business Pledged

DR. FORD'S PRESCRIPTION MAY HELP THE PATIENT, BUT IT WILL MAKE SOME OF THE OTHER DOCTORS FEEL AWFULLY SICK

"Tiger" Dying;
Can Last Only
a Few Hours

BY HENRY WALES.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

PARIS, Nov. 23.—Semiconscious and delirious for 24 hours, Georges Clemenceau, the father of victory, last night was given only twenty-four hours to live by doctors attending him. Several physicians said the "Tiger" might not live through the night. Relatives and close friends are at his bedside. At 5:30 a. m. he was still alive, but unconscious.

Uremia, the same dread malady which carried off Marshal Foch, has developed in the trail body of the French war premier. The prevalence of uric acid in the blood stream and throughout the system has caused terrible suffering, which made the stoic atheist cry out in pain Thursday before plentiful hypodermics of morphine deadened his senses. Late yesterday tubes of oxygen were rushed to the house.

Forecast Own Death.

Thus M. Clemenceau seems about to carry out the forecast he made last summer that he would not live the year out. A death watch is on in front of the old apartment house at 8 Rue Franklin.

A close personal friend of the "Tiger" on leaving the fat said the stricken man had never fully regained consciousness all day. He was kept under the influence of powerful opiates to ease the pains.

Although numerous callers left cards in the concierge's little booth inside the entry way, there was no great demonstration like the one which marked the demise of Marshal Foch. Government officials and political leaders are silent on what funeral honors will be accorded to the father of victory, in view of the bitter enemies the "Tiger" created when he was carrying on the campaigns which overthrew so many governments that he earned the nickname of the "cabinet breaker."

Speculate on Will.

Intimates of the family believe the "Tiger" will contain a clause insisting on private interment on his property in Vendee, facing the ocean and buried upright in a coffin standing open like his father before him. If this is the case, then the embarrassment of the officials will be overcome and the remains will be shipped quietly to Brittany for interment as directed.

While no total as to possible expenditures in 1930 was given, it was asserted that a movement to increase them "has been started and is being actively and intelligently pressed forward."

Two Billion More for Highways.

Reports as to construction work in other lines were given to the President during the afternoon in a conference attended by heads of various organizations which have to do with the subject.

It was stated that state and federal highway construction planned for 1930 totals about $1,100,000,000, an increase of 10 per cent over 1929.

County, municipal, and other highway and street construction work proposed totals as much more, making a grand total of $2,200,000,000. These expenditures are contingent to some extent upon the sale of bond issues.

commenting upon the telegram. It was stated at the White House that the railroad executives would assure larger investment in the railway equipment industry next year than in 1929 and a very substantial addition to the railway demands for steel.

The telegram follows in part: "The railway executives . . . represent approximately 97 per cent of the total operating revenues and approximately 91 per cent of the total railway mileage in the United States. They realize the national importance of the social and economic well-being of the country and their stability and prosperity and their duty so to discharge their transportation responsibilities as to make their service harmonious with the wisest and most intelligent judgment and plans for the public welfare."

An Impressive Program.

"The program of capital expenditures already arranged for is an impressive, amounting up to Oct. 1 of this year to $1,247,792,000 for class 1 railroads, of which $673,972,000 remained on the date to be expended. The figure of $1,247,972,000 compares with a capital program of $982,807,000 for the same period of 1928, an increase of over 38 per cent.

"The number of freight cars on order on Oct. 1 was 29,481, a greater figure than on the corresponding date in any year since 1924, and this number has been increased as of Nov. 1 to 23,642, which is an increase of 27,561 compared with the same date a year ago.

"On Oct. 1 there were 354 locomotives on order, as compared with 113 on the same date in 1928 and 134 in 1927.

Millions for Rail.

"There are also now on order approximately 1,000 and one-half million steel rails for delivery beginning early in 1930. It is estimated that this will be increased by orders for approximately one million additional tons, which would make the rail deliveries in 1930 approximately 2,500,000 tons and substantially in excess of last year.

"Not believing that there is any thing in existing conditions to indicate that the executives have no purpose, whatever to do, to abandon any of the program. They are proceeding with confidence in the future business prosperity of the country and in reliance upon the full cooperation of industry in all its branches, equally interested under these circumstances.

"It is their hope and expectation to proceed on at least a normal basis in their future capital and maintenance expenditures. A movement to increase them, however, has been started and is being actively and intelligently pressed forward.

Ready to Cooperate.

"In respect to your desire to organize a committee of contacts for the various industries with a view of harmonizing and stimulating construction work, resolutions were adopted at this meeting designating me as chairman of the executive committee of the Association of Railway Executives, to act for the railways as a means of keeping them in touch with other industrial groups and with developments as they occur; and I was requested to assure you of the willingness of the executives to assemble and make serviceable, through competent agencies, current figures with respect to capital expenditures and other available information that may be desired.

Construction Men Report.

The construction conference at the White House was attended by men who were described as representing service agencies which carry out the plans of others. They could not, therefore, make any promises as to the creation of new construction activity, but merely reported to the Pres-

Rail Chiefs Optimistic; Plan to Exceed 1929 Building Program in Coming Year

BY WILLIAM SHINNICK.

Confidence that 1930 will be a good business year for the railroads and assurance that their capital expenditures would at least be up to normal marked the meeting in Chicago yesterday of the Association of Railway Executives.

The attendance at the meeting, during which a report was prepared and forwarded to President Hoover, included the presidents of most of the 189 class one railroads. A few roads were represented by vice presidents. Only a negligible minority failed to have a representative present.

There was, however, a note of caution struck by the officials of the country's biggest transportation systems in discussing the exact amounts, or even approximations, of the sums they will place in circulation next year.

Frankly, many of them pointed out that they did not know and could not figure out until their budget meetings have been held.

No Definite Proposals.

The meeting was an executive session. It was stated authoritatively that none of the presidents was called on to outline definite spending projects. One or two admitted that they were prepared to give such information, but that they preferred not to

NO WAGE REDUCTION AT YOUNGSTOWN SHEET AND TUBE CO.'S PLANT

Youngstown, O., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Setting at rest fears of steel workers,

J. A. Campbell, president of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company, announced today there would be no reduction in wages in that industry so far as can be foreseen at present.

"The steel leaders here are optimistic in the industry," he said. During the summer production schedules were kept above the normal capacity of the plants, and mostly because of this fact the mills are now operating at not more than 55 per cent capacity.

In the period of restricted production, Campbell said work would be divided among employees so that all might have a part of the earnings.

Mr. Campbell's announcement followed his return from a conference of business and industrial leaders in New York.

"We have found that fundamental conditions in the country are favorable for continued prosperity," he said. "It will take a little time for the country to adjust itself, and during this period we can't hope for business to be as good as it was last winter, but the turn for the better is not far away."

dent such information as they had as to possibilities.

Secretary of Commerce Lamont and Secretary of Labor Davis were present at the conference.

Darwin P. Kingsley, president of the New York Life Insurance company, and William Kurth, former president of the national board of fire underwriters, were among those in attendance. Among others attending were: Frank H. Smith, president Portland Cement Association, Chicago; A. Trieschmann, president Home Modernizing Bureau of the National divided it after they learned it was not to be included in the communication to President Hoover.

"Railway expenditures have quickened the pulse of industry and have assisted manufacturers and merchants to carry on at high levels," said R. H. Ashton, chairman of the association's executive committee. "Their contribution has been well sustained in 1929 and gives promise of being carried over into 1930 on a higher level."

Northern Pacific Optimistic.

Charles Donnelly, president of the Northern Pacific, said that his construction expenditures in 1930 would approximate those of the present year and might go six or eight million dollars higher if contemplated new construction is taken up.

C. E. Jones, president of the Kansas City Southern, stated that his road's capital expenditures would run a little higher, and that the outlook for traffic was good in its territory. He anticipated better export demand for wheat in the future.

Among those present were P. E. Crowley, president of the New York Central; John J. Berent, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio; J. M. Davis, president of the Lackawanna; E. G. Buckland, chairman of the New Haven; J. A. Downey, president of the Union Central; J. E. Gould, president of the Rock Island, and F. W. Sargent, president of the North Western.

October and November. His budget is expected to be about the same as 1929. C. E. Denney of the Erie described his organization's capital expenditures for 1930 as to be "reasonably large." In 1929 this road spent thirty-two million dollars for such purposes.

W. G. Blvd, receiver of the Chicago and Alton, said that his road, not working on a budget system, would spend about the same next year, and that in a year or two more his plan would be in as good condition as it could be brought to.

Ashton Is Re-elected.

Mr. Ashton was reelected chairman of the executive committee of the association. Mr. Blvd was made a member of this committee, and Alfred P. Thom of Washington was elected general counsel.

Following the meeting, which considered the Hoover proposals, the rail executives held an afternoon meeting to deal with internal affairs of the organization.

Among those present were P. E. Crowley, president of the New York Central; John J. Berent, president of the Chesapeake and Ohio; J. M. Davis, president of the Lackawanna; E. G. Buckland, chairman of the New Haven; J. A. Downey, president of the Union Central; J. E. Gould, president of the Rock Island, and F. W. Sargent, president of the North Western.

Hoover for Final Plan.

"It is the intention that this meeting shall put us in a position to lay our requirements before the architects so that final plans may be drawn at once that will give Chicago the finest postoffice unit in the world."

Mr. Coleman said postoffice officials had been making a survey of postal services in the principal foreign countries and that this had been responsible for delay in starting a building program.

He said plans now under consideration include not only a $14,000,000 building for Chicago but a

PROMISES START ON POSTOFFICE HERE BY SPRING

Coleman and Lueder Discuss Postal Plans.

A tentative promise that work will be started on a new Chicago postoffice by early spring was made yesterday by Arch Coleman, first assistant postmaster general, who stopped here to confer with Postmaster Lueder on problems concerning Chicago postal service.

"There are a very few minor differences of opinion which must be ironed out before final plans can be made," Mr. Coleman said, "but I believe that these will be taken care of in the near future. There is to be a meeting between Postmaster General Brown and Chicago postmaster general this week in December to discuss trackage rights and allocation of space in the new building.

GIRL ENDS LIFE BY PLUNGE INTO LAKE; POLICE HUNT MOTIVE

Police last night were trying to discover the reason for the suicide of Pearl Backow, 17 years old, believed to be a former co-ed at the University of Indiana, who leaped into the lake late yesterday afternoon at the foot of Chicago avenue and drowned before help

Widow and Dorr Held to Grand Jury.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.
(Picture on back page.)

"My Bill thought Dorr the cleverest man in the world."

Donald O'Brien thus alluded to the feeling of his son, William J. O'Brien, the young husband's best friend,
Colonel Howard Dorr, the insurance salesman who was Bill O'Brien's confessed slayer and Mrs. O'Brien's sweetheart.

Dorr, who, with his wife and two children, occupied the flat beneath the O'Brien home at 7228 South Maplewood avenue, and Mrs. Genevieve O'Brien, wife of the dead man, yesterday were held to the grand jury
on the charge of a coroner's jury.
The jury decided that Mrs. O'Brien had taken a part in planning her husband's death.

Funeral to Be Monday.

Donald O'Brien, who is superintendent of warehouses for the election commission, sat with his silent, self-possessed wife in the parlor of their home at 5121 Emerald avenue, where muted and potted palms were placed preparatory to the funeral of their son Monday morning.

They seemed unable to grasp the extent of the duplicity of Dorr, the hand shaker, who always was so nice to them, so glib, so free and easy, and so good a friend to their son. They had their son, who urged him to work at his job so that her clandestine relationship could be carried on more simply.

It was the older O'Brien who, when Genevieve O'Brien, a slip of a woman, had fooled the police by her tale that she had shot her husband, insisted that Dorr had done the shooting and that he be taken to the hospital where she lay, to be identified as his assassinate. The elder Mrs. O'Brien told about Dorr's entering the hospital and quietly striding up the corridor, where she waited outside her son's room.

Mother Faces Son's Slayer.

"He came up to me," she said,
and put his arm around me and held my hand, and said, 'I feel so terrible for you, Mrs. O'Brien. This is terrible.' And I looked at him, and said, 'Mr. Dorr, why did you kill him?'

The woman then broke down in her sobbing, walked away and sobbed quietly until she calmed herself.

"I can't understand why Bill did not know that Gen was to become his mother," Mr. O'Brien said. "He had always been so wild for a child.
Anything else is a lie. He used to pray for children. And if he had known it he would have told me, and he confided everything they believed."

The parents said they believed the story of O'Brien's cruelty to his wife told by Dorr and Dorr was a carefully arranged lie which they had selected to shield her in her plan of taking the entire blame for the killing.

"He idolized Gen," Mr. O'Brien said.
"And every year he used to add another diamond to her ring on their anniversary," said William's brother, Donald Jr.

They All Attend a Party.

"Yes," the father went on, "last Saturday night when we joined them and the Dorns to celebrate their anniversary my boy brought out the ring and showed it to me. He was so smiling."

"Dorr was fine that night, offering all sorts of drinks. He was the life of the party always—a swell fellow."

"My boy worshiped him. But he was too smart for Bill."

Three months ago, the elder O'Brien told his son he told him that Dorr brought his wife to take out an insurance policy. He told him it would be too great a burden.

"I suspect him? Why, Bill was too busy to suspect anybody, and besides, he thought Dorr the greatest fellow in the world. He'd known him since 1923, when they worked on the street cars

together. He and Gen were Dorr's entire story, that the insurance man told him it would be too great a burden."

Deputy Commissioner Steggs said he truth, his son told him that Dorr

U. S. CAN'T JAIL 1% OF "FELONS" UNDER DRY ACT

Jones Law Denounced as Upheld by Judge.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service) Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—America's jails and penitentiaries would not hold 1 per cent of the convicted felons if the Jones "five and ten" law and the congressional act of 1920, upheld yesterday by Federal Judge Louis FitzHenry of Peoria, Ill., were effectively prosecuted, Senator Otto F. Glenn (Rep., Ill.) declared today.

The Illinois senator denounced the principle involved in the FitzHenry ruling as so extreme that it will defeat its own purpose and militate against, rather than aid, law enforcement. Were Washington, Jefferson, and Lincoln alive today and following the habits they followed while serving the country, he said, they would be felons subject to imprisonment at Leavenworth or Atlanta.

The statement of Senator Glenn was one of the mildest in a barrage of comments from Washington officials upon the FitzHenry decree, which caused the biggest prohibition stir in the capital since the Brookhart "wet dinner party" sensation.

WE SEE EVIL CONSEQUENCES.

Any person who buys liquor or sees a friend or relative violate the Jones law—is unless he reports his knowledge to the United States as a distiller or a bootlegger the Virgin Judge held it right to rule that he gave up his right to be prosecuted if Judge FitzHenry is right. FitzHenry looking at it as another step by fanatics to punish a felon himself is still applicable, Judge FitzHenry said.

Leading wet senators, among them Senator Millard E. Tydings (Dem., Md.) and Senator Royal S. Copeland (Dem., N. Y.), foresaw disastrous consequences if Judge FitzHenry is right. Tydings looking at it as another step by fanatics to punish a felon himself is still applicable, Judge FitzHenry said.

Although Mr. Mitchell refused to make any comment aside from answers to questions it is known that some curiosity has been shown by district attorneys on the matter of the legality of liquor purchasing. There have been no direct decisions, however, by the Circuit Court of Appeals or the Supreme court.

ENFORCEMENT NOT LIKELY.

James J. Britt, chief counsel for the prohibition bureau, stated frankly that, although he believed Judge FitzHenry's decision is legally correct, it will not be generally enforced.

Because of the fact that the decision was made in Illinois and upon an Illinois case, Senator Glenn devoted considerable time and thought today to news reports about it and his statement was deliberately prepared in writing. His friends interpreted it as the strongest pronouncement he has made upon the subject of prohibition. Senator Charles S. Deen (Rep., Ill.) was not in the city.

Senator Glenn explained that he believed against the Jones law that he believed it was an error. He then drew the conclusion that the Jones law and the 1920 law together, if effectively prosecuted, without favor, and all guilty of violations under the Volstead act, and all knowing of such violations and not reporting them, were sent to jail or to the penitentiary, the jails and penitentiaries, already overflowing, would not hold one per cent of those found guilty.

MATTHEW LEE ADAPTS.

"Almost every grocery store now sells malt extract—all used in the manufacture of home brew—is the commission of a felony," he continued.

"The clever boy who sells the extract, the boy who delivers it, the man or woman who uses it, and all who detect its odor, or see it drunk, are felons, unless they report it, subject to imprisonment at Leavenworth or Atlanta, and to the loss of their citizenship."

"I do not want my attitude to be misunderstood. I am in favor, of course, of law enforcement. The point I have endeavored to make is that this law is so extreme and so abominable that it will be misunderstood."

Mitchell Ignoring It.

At the department of justice, charged with enforcement of the Volstead and Jones acts, news of the revival of the eighteenth century statute received a cool reception. Asked if district attorneys have been instructed to take cognizance of the old law in enforcing the prohibition law, Attorney General William Mitchell answered, "No." He also answered "No" in reply to inquiries if any study of the 1920 statute was being made with a view to using it or if district attorneys have been directed to go after liquor buyers with the intention of testing a liquor buying case in the Supreme court.

DECLARATION ON RUM FELONIES CORRECTED BY JUDGE AT PEORIA

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 22.—[AP]—Federal Judge Louis FitzHenry today issued a statement to correct an opinion handed down yesterday, which, he said, either by inadvertent use of a word or by misquotation, conveyed the impression that he held any person knowing of another's possession of liquor to be a felon.

In the opinion upholding the constitutionality of the Jones law Judge FitzHenry had said that the buyer of liquor or any one knowing of a violation of the Jones law was—unless he reported his knowledge to the proper authorities—a felon. He based the opinion on a law passed in 1920 which made a felon any person knowing of the commission of a felony on one reporting it.

"I don't believe I said possession was a felony, but if I did it was incorrect," he said. "However, any person witnessing a violation of the Jones act without reporting it would be a felon."

Elaborating on the latter statement, he pointed out that a guest who sees a bootlegger sell liquor to his host, or knows that his host made the liquor he bought from another place, would under the 1920 act be a felon unless he reported the fact.

The mere possession of liquor is a misdemeanor under the national prohibition act. Manufacture, sale, and transportation of liquor are felonies under the Jones act.

LENIN'S BRAIN
SLICED; FINDS IT
HIGH POWERED

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Nov. 22.—[AP]

Prof. A. B. Fogt tonight said that microscopic examination of the brain of Nicolai Lenin in the five years since the father of the communist revolution died has shown that he had extraordinary qualities of intellect, breadth of vision, and richness of blood. Prof. Fogt is a well known brain expert of Berlin and president of the Moscow Institute for the Study of Brains.

These large cells, the professor said, explained Lenin's extraordinary grasp on matters, his quickness of thinking, and his comprehension of many subjects. Study of the brain of the communist leader will be continued next year.

Overanxious to End
His Own Life; He Fails

Joseph Hummel, 24 years old of St. Louis, was alive last night only because he was overeager in his efforts to commit suicide. Despondent over his failure to get a job, Hummel tied one end of his suitcase strap around his neck and the other end to a steam pipe in his room at 544 South State street, and jumped violently from a radiator. The strap broke, and when Hummel hit the floor he knocked a shower of plaster from the ceiling of the room below. The occupant of the room below called the police and Hummel was locked up at the detective bureau.

Talks of Brokers' Loans.

The mention of brokers' loans excited the interest of Senator Glass.

MADE NO STUDY OF RATES.

Kent freely admitted he knows little of legislative procedure or of the tremendous task involved in a general tariff revision. But, he added, all of those facts would not change a position—shared in by millions of others in the country. He said that the Senate could well afford to conduct business with a degree of the intelligence displayed by private enterprise in the conduct of its affairs.

When the tumultuous session, enjoyed by the biggest audience the lobby investigators have yet played to, was over, Kent remained firm in his belief that the senate coalition could have done agriculture, industry and the country a real and lasting service if it had been willing to take what it could get rather than have no tariff bill passed at all.

In the New York address which aroused the rallentement, Kent resulted in a demand for his appearance before the committee. Kent asserted that the failure or inability of the senate to "function" in the passage of some sort of a tariff bill caused widespread uncertainty in industry affected the stability of the stock market.

SENATE HASN'T FUNCTIONED.

"Well, the senate has adjourned and the country hasn't got a tariff bill, has it?" he asked half a dozen times today when some one of the senators would press for an explanation of his belief that the senate had not functioned.

Kent, one time executive of the First National bank in Chicago and more recently vice president and director of the Bankers' Trust company of New York, in addition to his connections with other important financial institutions, accepted the ordeal good naturally.

Kent insisted that "failure of the senate to function" was only one of several reasons advanced by him for the market debacle, naming as others "excessive federal and state individual gain taxes," the rapid issuance of new securities before they could be normally absorbed, and a general, unintelligent misunderstanding of brokers' loans.

RUSSIANS SHOOT AND DROWN 700 TRAPPED IN MINE

Civilians Fleeing Bombs
Mercilessly Slain.

BY JOHN POWELL.
Chicago Tribune Press Service.
MUKDEN, Manchuria, Nov. 21.—Gen. Liang Chung-cha, commander of brigade of Heilungkiang border defense troops at Mukden, in a report to headquarters here today revealed that between 700 and 800 Chinese and Russian civilians, mostly coal miners, were trapped in a coal mine and drowned or shot down by Russian troops during the recent capture and occupation of Dalai Nor by soviet forces.

Gen. Liang and the remnants of his brigade escaped from Mukden on Nov. 20 by a circuitous route and reached Harbin this morning. Gen. Liang is in the hospital there with wounds suffered in the battle.

Shortly after the evacuation of the Chinese troops the Russians reentered the city and reoccupied the old Russian barracks occupied by the czarist troops prior to 1918, when the bolshewic revolution forced the tsarist troops to evacuate Chinese soil. The Russians have advanced about thirty miles east of Mukden into China.

Chinese Commander Killed.

Gen. Liang's report confirmed the death of Gen. Han Kwan-tu, commander of the Chinese troops at Dalai Nor. He was killed during the Russian advance on Dalai Nor between 700 and 800 Chinese and Russian civilians went into the mines in order to escape the rain of bombs and artillery fire which was centered upon the little village adjoining the mines. When the soviet troops arrived and found the civilians underground, he said, they stationed a guard at the mouth of the mine, shooting all who attempted to escape. Then the valves were opened and the mines flooded. The entire population, he said, perished.

8,000 Chinese Captured.

KHABAROVSK, Siberia, Nov. 22.—The official Tass News Agency reported tonight that more than 8,000 Chinese soldiers and 300 officers had been captured and disarmed by soviet forces in a series of vigorous counter

MUST PAY $5,000 FOR WIFE HE WON OR STAY IN JAIL

Joseph Asch, a real estate dealer, yesterday failed to win freedom from the county jail, where he has been confined for two weeks for failure to appear in court for judgment won by John W. Cherry, 4606 North Hermitage avenue, in a suit for the alienation of the affections of his wife, Alelia, now married to Asch. Judge J. G. Van Jarecki, ruled that he could be jailed, in spite of his plea of bankruptcy, since malice was included in Cherry's cause of action.

The verdict was returned by a jury in Superior Judge Kavanagh's court in January, 1927. Asch left for Arizona and California with the former Mrs. Cherry without paying the judgment. On his return two weeks ago he was arrested and sent to the county jail. Attorney Edward J. Green, representing Cherry, contested Asch's plea for release. Judge Van Jarecki set a bond of $6,000, on which Asch may be released pending appeal.

War Romance

Mrs. Mary Root Collier, daughter of the late John Wellborn Root and sister of John W. Root, architect, yesterday won a divorce from Edward Maverick Collier of Paris before Superior Judge Williams. Mr. Collier charged desertion and waived alimony.

The Collers were married in Paris in 1919 in a war time romance. Collier, who had been in the French army, joined the American forces in 1917. He was wounded in action and joined the Red Cross after being declared unfit for army service. It was at that time that Mrs. Root, who was then the Red Cross, left him.

After the war the Collers returned to Chicago and lived here until 1926, when they went back to Paris. They separated in 1926 when Mrs. Collier went to China. She now lives at 18 East Elm street and is in charge of a travel bureau. Mr. Collier is a broker in Paris.

SENATE QUIT IN MIDST OF TARIFF FIGHT

No Progress is Made on Last Day of Session.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—With its work on the tariff bill still far from finished, the senate quit work shortly after noon today and formally adjourned at 10 p. m., ending the special congressional session called by President Hoover last spring. The house had adjourned at 1 p. m.

During the ten weeks it has been considering the tariff measure the senate has completed action on committee amendments to only nine of the schedules, leaving untouched proposed changes in the woolen goods, sugar, silk, rayon, paper, books, and sundries schedules, as well as the free list.

Smoot's Efforts Futile.

Prior to its adjournment today the senate made no further progress on the wool schedule on which it started yesterday by boosting the rate on raw wool from $1 to $4 cents a pound. After an hour of scattered discussion, it was decided that the controversial wool rags items should be delayed. After unsuccessfully attempting to bring up other items, Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah] stacked up his books and gave up. Senator James Couzens [Rep., Mich.] then moved the senate recess until 9:45 o'clock, fifteen minutes before the time set for adjournment. Objections were overruled and the Couzens motion passed.

House Argues Time Away.

Meanwhile a handful of representatives in a brief house session stirred up a short but lively debate among themselves on the tariff.

Representative Frank C. Crotcher [Rep., N. Y.] a strong protectionist, argued that the Smoot-Hawley bill equaled the cost of American production.

Failure to pass the bill would, he asserted, be an encouragement to American capital to invest abroad.

Representative John E. Rankin [Dem., Miss.] scoffed at the argument that the farmers would receive an advantage from the tariff, arguing that the high industrial rates offset any benefit to agriculture.

JAIL HUSBAND AND FIND HIM.
James Lane, 48 years old, 13431 Avenue O, was fined $100 and sentenced to a year in the Bridewell and his wife, Anna, 30, was placed on probation for a year yesterday by Judge Max Luster in the South Division court on a charge of contributing to the delinquency of Mrs. Lane's 16 year old sister.

BOY SEES BANDITS KILL MOTHER IN $3 STORE HOLDUP

While her 4 year old son, Joseph, looked on, Mrs. Mary Flazik, 14 years old, was shot fatally last night by two Negro robbers who held her up in her grocery store and meat market at 2330 Carey street, Indiana Harbor. She died an hour later at the St. Catherine's home in Indiana Harbor.

The boy told the police that the two Negroes entered the store and ordered his mother to put on her hands. When she failed to comply with their command, one of the Negroes opened fire. Two bullets entered Mrs. Flazik's body. Her husband, John, who was in the basement, heard the shots and reached the store just as the bandits fled out of the door, after grabbing up $3 in change from a cash drawer.

Mrs. Flazik was the mother of three small children.

GRAFT PAYMENTS TOLD BY STATE IN SLOT CONSPIRACY

21 Defendants Woven in Story of Plot.

the trial considerably. A few days ago while the jury was being chosen, Spike fired his lawyer and announced he would be his own attorney. Yesterday he fired his steward because he explained he couldn't be bothered with running the house. And then he announced his determination to cross-examine witnesses and present extensive arguments in his own behalf.

"Wait'll I get that guy Rockola on cross-examination," exclaimed the gangster. "I'll give him plenty!"

Spike's determination to do without lawyers was better understood after Mr. Ayers had fixed Spike's profits of the conspiracy at $100.

Whatever the shortcomings of O'Donnell's legal advice, the other defendants well overbalance them. Included among the defense attorneys are former Judge George F. Barret, Thomas Sypes, Everett Jennings, Lowell Richardson, Mrs. S. C. George Guenther, John F. Tyrrell, and Harry Bissell. The last named, who has been personal attorney for Mayor Thompson, appears as counsel for Dr. Reid.

Ayers Lays Foundation.

Opening his statement of facts which the state expects to prove, Mr. Ayers read the ordinances creating the police department and outlining its duties, and the laws prohibiting gambling with slot machines.

Then he told of the alleged efforts of O'Brien and Rockola to operate slot machines, and of how the then police commissioner, Michael Hughes, had put the lid on all gambling in November, 1927.

"There was a lull in the operation of the slot machines," Ayers declared. "Then O'Brien and the state's witness, William E. Keeney, had a meeting and discussed another type of machine, which provided for the return of metal discs instead of cash, and which were manufactured by Fred Mills, another defendant, and the Mills Mint Vending Machine company.

O'Brien reported later that he had taken the matter up with the authorities, and that the machines were satisfactory. Keeney then arranged with Mills so that the former had the exclusive right to sell the machines in Chicago. Mills refused to sell machines to any one except with the consent of Keeney.

Divide Up Territory.

Every purchaser had to be approved by O'Brien, and each purchaser was given a definite territory in which he could operate. Mills collected fixed percentages from all operators, and turned over to O'Brien in a period of three or four months sums totaling $90,000.

Alex Levine, another state witness, operated gambling machines in the stockyards district, giving a list of his locations to Keeney. For this privilege Levine paid O'Brien $300 weekly.

The arrangement between the witness Rockola and O'Brien provided that the latter should receive 75 per cent of the profits of machines owned by Rockola, who would retain 25 per cent. During the course of the latter part of 1927 up to May, 1928, Rockola paid O'Brien a total of $190,000.

Tells of Police Payments.

Rockola discussed matters with Frank Heydon of the 7th ward and made arrangements for operation of slot machine. He was paid in cash by Rockola on four occasions from $100 up to $250. Rockola was then sent by O'Brien to the police station commanded by the defendant, Capt. Patrick Collins. He introduced himself to the captain as the man with the mint machines, and made a payment to Collins of $250. During the next three months he made three additional payment to Collins, to $300, $250, and $250.

In May, 1927, Rockola was sent to see the defendant Elmer Brown, political committeeman in the 10th ward, and made an arrangement with him for $400 on several occasions.

About Feb. 1, Rockola introduced himself to Capt. Malloy. Rockola paid Capt. Malloy four monthly payments of $400, $300, $250, and $200.

Capt. Dolaney was interviewed at the same time, and later was paid $200 and then $100 in currency. These captains and the others permitted the slot machines to be operated in many places in their districts, in full view of the public passing by on the sidewalk.

Rockola was then sent by O'Brien into the Englewood district, where the defendant, Matthew J. Dillon, operated machines in his pool hall. Dillon was talking at the time to a man known as Smith, who called himself the representative of the defendant, Dr. Reid. Smith insisted that things would have to be fixed up with Reid if the machines were to stay in Dillon's place.

Rockola communicated with O'Brien and was told to get in touch with Reid. He went to see Reid and paid him $100, $400, and April, $300. Complaint was made by Reid that the payments weren't sufficient.

Other Transactions Related.

Similar transactions then were charged by the prosecutor between Rockola and the defendants, John W. Hoff, south side ward politician; Sam Haro, cabinet owner and politician; Alvin E. Dyer, Thompson committee man in the 6th ward, and Spike O'Donnell.

According to the prosecutor, Rockola, in Capt. Gill $700 in two payments, and Gill complained the danger he ran was too great for such insignificant sums.

Going back to the story of the coin machine, the slot machines out of the city hall, Mr. Ayers said that a number of the syndicate's machines were seized in a raid by Capt. Thomas Condon.

"These were taken to the office of the police custodian, presided over by the defendant, Frank J. Beran," Ayers said. "Rockola complained to O'Brien over the loss of his machines, and O'Brien promised to see about getting them back."

In May, 1928, O'Brien told Rockola to see Beran. The two went down to the storeroom in the basement of the city hall, and Rockola picked out 45 or more slot machines which he claimed were his property. The next day he told he could take them out.

Machines Are Recovered.

"On the third day Rockola appeared at the city hall at 6 o'clock in the morning, with a truck and two men. The three men went to the storeroom. John Zovich, another city employee, had been ordered by Beran to turn over the machines. They were turned out to the motor trucks.

"On three occasions Rockola met Beran and paid him $300, $100 and $80.

Rockola was also instructed by O'Brien to go to 2700 South State street, a police station where slot machines seized by the gambling syndicate of the police department were stored.

He was told to see 'Bob.' This was the defendant Robert Sullivan, a police sergeant, who had custody of these machines. Three times truckloads of the slot machines were taken away by Rockola from this police station.

"They were taken to Rockola's factory, where the numbers were sometimes changed. The official police records of the defendant Beran show that he should have had custody of machines which we located in Rockola's factory.

Rockola went to the district presided over by the defendant Capt. McCarthy, who was paid two or three sums, which I cannot give at this time. In February, 1928, Rockola was sent to see Capt. Tobin and paid him $400. Later he paid him another $100.

"So many machines were placed in operation that truant officers were compelled to make canvases around schools, and were led to demand that the police remove the machines from the vicinity of school buildings where school children frequently gambled on the machines."

Rockola was then sent by O'Brien

Two Defendants Freed as Witness Balks.

Mrs. Margaret Welch, 29 years old, provided the climactic thrill yesterday for the amazing comedy-drama billed as "The Granday Murder Trial," which is playing its first week to packed houses in Judge Joseph B. David's courtroom in the Criminal Courts building.

Going back to the story of the coin machine, the slot machines out of the city hall, Mr. Ayers said that a number of the syndicate's machines were seized in a raid by Capt. Thomas Condon.

"These were taken to the office of the police custodian, presided over by the defendant, Frank J. Beran," Ayers said. "Rockola complained to O'Brien over the loss of his machines, and O'Brien promised to see about getting them back."

CRIMINAL COURT.

Grant Smith, murderer, sentenced to life imprisonment in the penitentiary by Judge Harry A. Lewis.

John Reid, sentenced to 1 year in the penitentiary by Judge Otto Kerner.

John Angelo, rape, sentenced to 5 years in the penitentiary; Julian Alberti, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary; William Green, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary, by Judge William N. Gemmill.

Lewis Alexander, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary; Walter Klemperer, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary; Lee Smith, attempted larceny, sentenced to 1 to 5 years in Pontiac reformatory, by Judge John J. Sullivan.

Three automobiles took part in the chase, all the witnesses said. First came the "feeling" car, with Grant Smith huddled beside the driver. Then came a Cadillac automobile, sounding a siren, which bullets poured at the first car. A hundred feet behind sped a third automobile, a green sedan.

Some of the witnesses said the second car was a detective bureau squad car. None could identify any occupants of this car and the defense did not cross-examine them.

"We've run out of witnesses," Prosecutor Haynes told Judge David early in the afternoon. "We'd like a recess until Monday morning."

Judge David ordered the adjournment until Monday. The jurors were dismissed as they were marched away. They will be locked up over Saturday and Sunday, and they apparently contemplated the prospect with little enthusiasm.

The woman was to have testified that she was keeping company with Thomas Sommerville, one of the defendants, in April, 1928, when the murder occurred, said Mr. Ayers.

She told that she was present in the home of Lorraine Irwin when Sommerville was there with Balacastro and Armando, also defendants here.

She said Balacastro was cleaning a gun and talking about how he and Armando had killed a Negro on prison day.

Defense Charges Bribery.

As a result Special Prosecutor Frank J. Loesch nolled the murder charges against two of the eight defendants, James Balacastro and John Armando, said Mr. Ayers.

"Our investigators reported that Miss Welch was to be paid $1,500 for trumped up testimony," he declared.

"I don't want to hear any more about it," said Judge David.

George Limpke, 1905 West 13th street, was the next state's witness. He saw the shooting of Granday but squinted did not arrive on the scene of the murder primary in May, 1928.

Then came a long procession of witnesses, all Negroes, who told of the exciting chase through the streets which ended in the killing of Granday. This chase began at Blue Island and Washburne avenues and ended a mile away at 13th street and Hoyne avenue.

CALDWELL WARNS BOARD HE WILL STAND BY BOGAN

Opposes Any Move to Reduce Authority.

Any attempt of the school trustees to interfere with the authority and responsibilities of William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, will be opposed by H. Wallace Caldwell, president of the board of education. This statement was made last night by Mr. Caldwell in answer to the current reports that the Thompson controlled board intends reinstating Ernest E. Cole as assistant superintendent without the recommendation of Supt. Bogan.

At the same time the board's hinted action continued to be the subject of discussion by numerous civic organizations. The education committee of the City club held a special meeting to consider the reports. Dr. Charles S. Bacon, chairman, said formal action will not be taken at the present time.

Calls Rumors Unfortunate.

The efforts of certain organizations to anticipate the action of the board, an indication that Mr. Bogan is to be either ejected or sheared of his powers is extremely unfortunate," Mr. Caldwell said. "Mr. Bogan knows that such a movement is not contemplated, but it must necessarily be disturbing to him and to his subordinates."

From many sources, however, it was learned that Mr. Bogan is of the opinion a concerted movement is underway to reduce his powers by the method used in the case of the board's attorney, James Todd. It was intimated that pressure from political higher-ups was being exerted on the board.

In view of President Caldwell's statement and the assured support of Mrs. W. S. Heffernan and James Mulligan, the two Dever appointees on the board, Mr. Bogan's position may not be in such peril as rumored. Eight votes are necessary to reinstate Cole without the superintendent's recommendations, Mr. Caldwell pointed out. This is based on a full board of eleven members. There is at present one vacancy on the board.

Debate Case of Cole.

Cole's status will be taken up at the next meeting of the committee of the whole. Mr. Caldwell said he has asked Attorney Todd to compile a historical summary of the case. Cole is also preparing a statement justifying his claims. This information and the legal opinion that Cole would have difficulty in proving to a court his right to his former office will be submitted to the trustees. School officials said it was unlikely this data could be obtained before the next regular board meeting.

To Go Under Knife

IDLE PRISONERS DEFEAT ILLINOIS CONVICT REFORM

Records Reveal Failure of Prison System.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 22.—Illinois has $9,052,000 invested in state prisons at Joliet, Menard and Pontiac. It spends more than $2,000,000 a year to restrain, employ, amuse, train and reform its felons.

Some students assert that the results have been to encourage rather than curb crime. It has been said that the crime hazard to society has increased instead of decreased. But local police, prosecutors, judges and juries contribute largely to the results referred to in those expressions.

The state receives the criminal only after he is convicted. But its task is important. The results obtained recently have been disappointing. In only one of the five allotted jobs of properly handling convicts has the state been meeting with much success: it has placed the criminals in prison and kept them locked up.

Where State Falls Down.

Now the four demerits: 1. The employment of prisoners has been almost a failure. 2. The schooling of the prisoners has been inferior with little results. 3. The amusements have been freely criticized and the state's contribution to reform of prisoners has been feeble and unsatisfactory.

The statistics of the state's reform of prisoners have been questioned and indicated as inaccurate by reputable and competent investigators.

This gently summarizes the state prison status when Gov. Emmerson came into office. The findings are those of a commission appointed by state authority during the later part of Gov. Small's administration.

Gov. Emmerson is more deeply concerned with his penal problem than with anything else in the administration of the state's affairs. It is now much larger, more serious and more difficult than at any time in the 110 years of Illinois' statehood. It has more perplexing angles and vexatious features than were encountered by any previous governor.

Prisons are Overcrowded.

It took Illinois 100 years to get 3,900 criminals in its prisons at one time; but in the last 10 years it has taken in 3,900 more. In a word, the prison population at the end of the first 100 years has been doubled in the last 10 years. The prisons are taxed beyond their capacity. Rodney Brandon, director of public welfare, says that Joliet has 2,700 permanent cells, Menard 1,600 and Pontiac 1,200. But this morning in Joliet there were 3,799 prisoners, 2,014 in Menard, and 1,987 in Pontiac. A total of 7,809 prisoners has been crammed into 5,400 cells.

The average citizen probably says: "What of it? If they hadn't been crooked, they wouldn't be in prison. Why so solicitous about the comfort of convicts?"

But Illinois has the indeterminate sentence plan, as have all other states in the Union except two. Under the indeterminate scheme nearly all of the convicts will be discharged sooner or later. They will be turned out either as enemies of society, bent upon violence and vengeance, or with a desire to lead a straight life.

Bad Influence for Youths.

It is difficult to estimate the bad and lasting influence an older criminal may have upon a younger one who is locked up with him in the intimate contact of a small cell," wrote Dean Albert J. Harno of the law school of the University of Illinois after his investigation in 1927.

While the congestion is now much greater, Dr. Harno found that 2,448 prisoners in Joliet were paired, two in a cell. In Pontiac, there were 1,100 two in a cell, 41 boys in a vacant room, and 55 cells were occupied by three persons each. The congestion at Menard was then worse than at either Joliet or Pontiac. At that time there was only 6,316 inmates in the three institutions, while today the number is 7,800.

Congestion Is Worse.

Since then 538 temporary cells have been constructed, but the congestion is still much worse than was two years ago, and because of that condition younger offenders are being trained to lives of crime by the older and more experienced criminals. Even at Pontiac, where the younger criminals are supposed to be sent, there are 1,987 prisoners today for 1,200 cells. This condition exists in the face of the fact that in the state fiscal year of 1928, 817 prisoners were paroled out of Pontiac, as compared with 298 in the preceding year—a boost of 174 per cent.

A prudent state administration would have anticipated the need of more cell rooms and provided for them accordingly. While the state kept the felons locked up, except for occasional escapes, the prisoners were housed in such a way as to encourage and promote crime rather than reform the convicts.

Must Employ Prisoners.

As bad as that is, it is probably not the worst feature of the Emmerson inheritance in penal matters.

Common sense long ago decided and scientists have since proved that employment of prisoners is an absolute essential of any effective prison management. In recent years Illinois has not provided enough work to keep its prisoners busy. It hasn't provided enough amusements and recreation to keep the idlers out of trouble; nor has it provided schools enough to attract the attention of the prisoners when not otherwise occupied.

There too are the views of a small commission of the conditions existing under the Small administration. At the date of investigation, there were 5,669 prisoners in Joliet, Menard and Pontiac, of which only 2,695 were reported as "employed." Of the 3,132 in Joliet, only 1,000 were reported as employed. Of the 1,972 in Menard, 1,278 were employed. In Pontiac jobs were available for 417 for an inmate population of 1,380. In the aggregate only 40.9 per cent were employed.

The records indicate that the prisoners had less employment inside the prisons than they had before they were "sent down," and the outside employment was not sufficient to keep them out of crime.

Again referring to official records, which in both instances are the latest printed, there were 1,766 prisoners admitted to the three prisons in the state's fiscal year of 1928. Of these, 821 are shown as having been employed, in various degrees, before going to prison. 46.6 per cent were employed and after getting inside only 40.9 per cent had anything to do.

It is stretching the truth a trifle to say that this 40.9 per cent had prison employment. John Landesco wrote after an investigation of the three prisons for the Small administration that the shoe shop at Joliet could employ 70 men, but the number assigned to the shop was 125. In the making of wood furniture about 280 men were assigned, but that this industry could not efficiently work more than 100.

Without Actual Labor.

Commenting on the situation, Mr. Landesco reported:

"The superintendent has accounted for the employment of about 1,000 men, but a large portion of them are in vain assignments, without actual labor."

Regarding Pontiac he reported: "There is admittedly a great deal of idleness, unassigned men, idleness on the job, overmanning and 'busy-work' assignments."

At Menard, the investigator said, "the idle time that could be conserved would amount to one-third on the inmate manpower of the institution."

The importance of employment is shown vividly by the state's own records.

What Parole Records Show.

An investigation of 1,000 paroled convicts from each of the state prisons showed that from three to five times as many with records of regular work before conviction made good after being paroled from prison as the prisoners with no previous work record.

Of the prisoners paroled from Joliet, 44.6 per cent who had no record for work before they entered the state penitentiary violated their parole. Of those who worked regularly before they went to prison, only 12.2 per cent violated their parole.

At Pontiac only 8.8 per cent of the previous workers violated parole while 28 per cent of the nonworkers did so.

At Menard the contrast was more striking. Five per cent of those who were workers before commitment violated parole, while the violators among the nonworkers amounted to 25 per cent.

Crime Hazard Increased.

The purpose of prison employment is to teach the inmate the work habit, which is generally recognized as one of the best curatives for criminal tendencies.

The present state administration has attempted to put in school every convict who is not employed, as a temporary expedient. The state officers are trying to develop vocational schools, but they have not yet been well started. More employment is being devised and more housing facilities are to be obtained.

JUROR'S ILLNESS CAUSES DELAY IN McMANUS TRIAL

Gamblers Describe Game Held Slaying Cause.

New York, Nov. 22.—[Special]—One of the jurors in the trial of George A. McManus became ill today. He reported his illness to General Sessions Judge Charles G. Nott Jr. after an adjournment of the trial had been taken until Monday and asked to be excused from further service.

The juror was Eugene A. Riker, a salesman. His plea was made after three additional state witnesses had testified and the defense had obtained a week-end adjournment at 2 o'clock for a conference with a small arms expert.

A woman from Montreal, one of the prosecution's "surprise" witnesses, had testified. She had been a guest in the Park Central hotel on the night of Nov. 19, 1928, when the state has proved to have. Rothstein was shot in room 348. The witness said she had heard an "explosion" as she sat reading in her room. At first she thought it a shot, but later presumed it to have been an automobile backfiring.

Poker Players Testify.

Two of the participants in the big stud poker game which the state contends furnished McManus with a motive to kill Rothstein told their stories. One was Alvin C. Thomas, known as "Titanic," who swore that the game was on "the level" when Chief Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora suggested that Thomas and Rothstein had a common interest in the game. The other was Meyer Boston, Solomon, known as Meyer Boston, the 51-year-old man who took the stand and said he was in the game.

When Mr. Riker disclosed his sickness the judge appointed a physician to examine him and report when the trial is resumed on Monday.

The dismissal of the jurors would not necessarily result in a mistrial. With the agreement of both sides the special panel of 150 talesmen from which the jury was selected was recalled for the selection of a successor to Mr. Riker.

May Read Transcript.

If a successor is found the procedure, again with mutual consent, would be to read the testimony to date. Seven witnesses have testified and at least a day would be required to read the transcript of their testimony.

Attorneys for both sides signed their readiness to agree to a substitute juror if Riker is excused.

Boston, who had been Sam testified Thursday, was the first witness today. As the first question was asked Boston shifted his gaze to McManus. The defendant looked without interest at him.

The witness said that he knew James Meehan and had been a friend of his for seven or eight years. Meehan, an earlier witness, had admitted that the stud game had been played in his apartment on West 54th street on Sept. 7, 1928.

The game began at 10 p.m. with a few warming up rounds of bridge, and continued with constant acceleration of bets on the poker hands until 5 p.m. the next night.

Boston was called the game and said that he had been in it.

"Did this defendant win or lose?" said Mr. Pecora.

"He lost," said the witness.

"How much?"

"I think $51,000."

"Did he pay in cash?"

"In cash and in checks."

The examiner asked if Rothstein

FATHER WINS

Richard J. Reining and his five-year-old daughter, Marilyn.

After nine months of litigation during which he was given permission to win the affections of his 6-year-old motherless daughter, Marilyn, Richard Joseph Reining, a music teacher, 6723 Maplewood avenue, yesterday was granted custody by Superior Judge Eller. Reining's claim was contested by his daughter's grandmother, Mrs. Lena Lagnstrom, 6404 Dorchester avenue.

The girl had been cared for by her grandmother since last February, when her mother died. Reining and his wife had been estranged for three years before he decided, through his attorney, Harry X. Cole, brought habeas corpus proceedings for the custody of Marilyn.

Judge Eller delayed decision, allowing Reining to see his daughter. From time to time the judge allowed him greater opportunity to see the child, until yesterday he was given complete custody.

He had won or lost, and whether he had paid in cash or not.

"He lost," replied Boston, "about $400,000. He didn't pay in cash; he made out ten to fifteen I. O. U.'s."

"There had been no limit on the bets, either in the game or in the side bets on which player would turn up the highest card. The side bets, it was reported, had ranged from $200 to $5,000 a card. Rothstein had plunged recklessly, Boston testified, placing bets of $5,000 or $5,000 each with four or five players on each deal.

Nathan Raymond, called "Nigger Nate," was the big winner. He ended holding $215,000 of Rothstein's promises to pay. It is the theory of the state that Rothstein's failure to pay this and other debts incurred in the game caused McManus to become suspicious that the game had been "fixed."

"Titanic" won $20,000, said the witness, and Bernstein, so far as some what mysterious figure in the trial, was $70,000 ahead when the last hand was dealt.

Quarreled About Bills.

At this point Mr. Pecora asked Boston if he knew Hyman (Gilly) Biller, and the witness said he did. Biller, with two men named John Doe and Edward Ross, was named with McManus as the slayers of Rothstein. Biller has been missing since the night of the wounding of Rothstein.

"Did you ever see Biller in the company of George A. McManus?" inquired Mr. Pecora.

"Yes, sir."

"Titanic" Thomas was quite the most sartorial picture among the witnesses. The witness seemed pallid, probably from recent illness.

In addition to running a night club, Thomas said he was a "golf player for the money."

The witness said that he had played in the big card game and had won $20,000. He had been paid in cash and markers.

Paid Rothstein $10,000.

All of his winnings had come from McManus, he said. The amount the game was over he had paid $10,000 to Rothstein. He disclosed that he had borrowed $20,000 from Rothstein and $5,000 on two other occasions—"maybe more—I don't remember exactly."

"When you borrowed from Arnold Rothstein did you give notes?" asked the examiner.

"Yes, he took notes," said Thomas.

"Isn't it a fact, Thomas," said Mr. Pecora, "that the $10,000 you paid to Rothstein was paid because of an interest he had with you?"

"I paid it because I owed it," responded Thomas smoothly.

The woman who heard the "explosion" in the Park Central is Miss Marguerite Hubbell of the Place Viger hotel, Montreal. She is a publicity agent.

2 Mile Wide Grasshopper Wave Drives All from Town

MARRAKECH, Morocco, Nov. 22.—[U. P.]—A two mile wide swarm of grasshoppers attacked this city today, driving the natives into the desert. Airplanes were used to fight off the insect hordes, which broke down telephone wires with their weight. Troops with flame throwers have been called out. Soldiers captured 5,000 sacksful of the grasshoppers near Rabat and retailed them to civilians, who regard them as delicacies, after candying them.

A motorcycle policeman arrested Hawes. On the way to the station house, according to the policeman, Hawes dropped a bottle of wine.

Companionate Experiment Leads to Alimony.

New York, Nov. 22.—[Special]—On Sept. 1, 1928, Capt. Charles E. McKillips, war veteran, and his wife, Mrs. Clara E. McKillips, began what they called "a companionate separation," because they felt they were getting on each other's nerves. They agreed that the separation was to last for three days.

Capt. McKillips had been wounded and suffered from headaches. He married in 1922.

INSTITUTE RULES ON SEVERAL POINTS FOR NEW CRIMINAL CODE

In its concluding sessions yesterday the American Law Institute's conference of bar association cooperating committees held at Northwestern University Law school reached several important decisions in reference to the code of criminal procedure upon which the institute is working.

Among the decisions cast by the vote of those present were these:

1. An officer may break into a building, in cases of misdemeanor, when the offense is committed in his presence and he has followed in hot pursuit.

2. No peace officer or other official shall use oppressive methods to obtain a confession or other evidence from an arrested person.

3. Indicted persons should not have access to grand jury minutes but should be given a list of witnesses with the court authorized to permit the state to call additional witnesses.

The discussion was led by Prof. Edward R. Keedy and Prof. William E. Mikell, both of the University of Pennsylvania. Among those who participated were former Justice Floyd E. Thompson of the Illinois Supreme Court; Dean William G. Hale of the University of Washington, St. Louis; Chief Justice Herbert O. of the Chicago Municipal court; Prof. Andrew A. Bruce of Northwestern University; Prof. Edward W. Hinton of the University of Chicago; George B. Rose of Little Rock, Ark.; Silas H. #### BORDER OFFICER IS FINED $25 FOR SHOOTING SPREE

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 22.—[Special]—A uniformed coast guardman who "shot up the town" in regular wild west fashion paid $25 for his fun in the court today.

The guardman, Clyde F. Hawes, 21 years old, of Rochester, N. Y., was arrested last night at a street intersection on the lower west side. Pedestrians and residents of the district scurried for shelter when Hawes, pulling out a revolver, fired several shots in various directions. None of them did any damage.

A motorcycle policeman arrested Hawes. On the way to the station house, according to the policeman, Hawes dropped a bottle of wine.

COUNTY IS ASKED TO OUST JACOBS, EFFICIENCY MAN

Board Gets Resolution from Frank Wilson.

A resolution calling on the county commissioners to terminate a $30,000 a year contract with J. L. Jacobs, efficiency expert, at the end of the fiscal year Dec. 1 was introduced yesterday before the county board by Commissioner Frank J. Wilson. In his six years of service the efficiency expert has frequently roused the ire of commissioners and on one occasion argued with Chairman Charles Krut, head of the board of assessors.

Frequent appeals to his ouster have been made to President Cermak by officials angered by what they have deemed his unreasonable demands for economy and interference with the conduct of their departments. To all such requests Cermak has given the answer, "He's not my baby. He was here when I took office. I didn't make the contract."

Criticized by Judge.

The direct cause of the resolution is said to be Jacobs' attitude before the circuit judges' committee on help. Several times during the hearings the judges paused to censure Jacobs for his opposition to job requests made by his officers. At one of the hearings Judge Klarkowski suggested that to much the county is facing a $400,000 deficit, while its efficiency expert the commissioners might begin saving in that department.

The clashes before the judges had no echo in the budget committee of the county board Thursday. When news arrived late at the committee meeting Commissioner Wilson made no suggestion that he be docked for his day's pay. Jacobs sat apart from the commissioners and took no part in the proceedings.

The resolution was introduced near the close of the board meeting.

"Whereas, while the services of J. L. Jacobs & Co. as a whole for a number of years have been beneficial, the constant bickerings of J. L. Jacobs with heads of departments and elected officials have partially offset his usefulness," it read. "Therefore, be it resolved, that the services of J. L. Jacobs & Co., whose contract terminates at the end of this fiscal year, be not renewed."

No Personal Matter.

"You know there is nothing personal in this," Wilson declared to Jacobs, slapping him on the back and insisting on shaking hands with him. "You've done fine work, very fine work."

Jacobs made no comment. Other commissioners refused to comment on the resolution. There was no roll call at the request of Commissioner Wilson, and the resolution was referred to the budget committee.

Earlier in the day the commissioners enlisted the aid of civic and social welfare groups to convince the judges' committee on help to reduce the number of jobs so that charitable activities, under spending power of the board, will not suffer unduly in 1930. The groups will be lead by Attorney Adolph Kurz, president of the Jewish Home and Aid Society, and Wilfred S. Reynolds, chairman of the pension board of the county bureau of public welfare.

They will present arguments to the committee consisting of Judges Kerner, Klarkowski and Feinberg, today. The judges have already taxed the county board with responsibility for the deficit and indicated that they will refuse to make cuts. Assurance that this position will be maintained was given by Chief Justice Taylor after a meeting of Circuit court judges.

OUTER ASKED

CICERO ASSESSOR DEFIES COUNTY'S TAX REVALUATION

May Lose His Pay for Using Old Figures.

Assessor Frank Houcek of Cicero yesterday defied the state tax commission in returning the suburb's assessment rolls, filling in the 1928 valuations with the figures for the voided 1927 quadrennial and ignoring the increased valuations of the reassessment staff. His rebellion came after attempts to stir up agitation against the system which has increased the valuation of assessable property in Cicero from $17,000,000 in 1927 to $46,000,000 in 1928.

As a result of his disregard of the orders and rules of the state tax commission, Assessor Houcek may face criminal charges and may lose his pay.

This was pointed out by County Attorney Hayden Bell and chairman William H. Malone of the state commission. In addition the assessor's action will accomplish nothing, they said, since Harry S. Cutmore, director of the reassessment, declared his staff will use Houcek's figures and substitute the 1928 valuations.

Attorney Goes to Attorney.

Assessor Houcek walked quietly into the assessors' offices yesterday, left his books and went away. An assistant discovered that he had disregarded the figures compiled by the reassessment staff, and filled in the blanks for the 1928 figures with those of the quadrennial assessment. Director Cutmore made known his stand and consulted Attorney Bell.

"Fine," said Mr. Bell. "Houcek has played into our hands. He has performed his official function of making an assessment. He's out now. It is the duty of the board of assessors to copy and review the figures. He will find himself in difficulties, even to possible criminal action."

Mr. Malone expressed indignation at the first open defiance of the state commission.

Malone Promises Action.

"Assessor Houcek will find that the state commission will go to the limit to support the validity of the assessment," he said. "I will make an investigation to discover what action may be taken against him. The commission will not tolerate anything harmful to the program at this time."

"There is one point Houcek has overlooked which may bring him sorrow. Under the rules of the commission we are empowered to approve all paid rolls for work in connection with the reassessment. Since he has failed to turn out his work in conformity with the rules he will certainly receive no pay."

Chairman Malone stressed the necessity for the people of Cicero to force a decrease in their tax levies. If the Cicero agencies refuse to cut levies to a point which will give them the same revenue they have had in the past, the tax bills will be trebled, and the spending bodies will have far more revenue than they need, he said.

DAVIS OF DETROIT NAMED TO HELP U. S. ROUT NO. INDIANA VICE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—Earl J. Davis of Detroit, former special assistant to the United States attorney general, has been appointed by the department of justice to assist in the prosecutions of persons indicted in Lake county, Ind., during the recent vice investigation. The cases in which Mr. Davis will take part, as the assistant to District Attorney Oliver M. Loomis, are now pending in the Hammond division of the northern Indiana judicial division.

Raleigh P. Hale, mayor, and James W. Regan, chief of police of East Chicago, were among the scores of persons charged with violation of the national prohibition act in indictments returned this fall following a long drawn grand jury investigation.

Mr. Davis was district attorney for the eastern district of Michigan for two years, resigning to accept a position as assistant attorney general of the United States in 1924.

"IZZY" LAZARUS,
EX-BETTING POOL
MAGNATE, DEAD

Clarence (Izzy) Lazarus, a figure in the old days of the "open town" died last night at his apartment in the Piccadilly hotel at 5107 Blackstone avenue after a long illness of heart disease. He was 48 years old.

Lazarus a few years ago conducted a poolroom at 229 East 47th street, at 4568 Grand boulevard, and when that place was raided he opened a similar establishment at 229 East 47th street and prospered there until late in 1921.

At one time he was known as the largest commissioner of baseball bets in the country and then as one of the largest operators of baseball pools. In the last few years little had been heard of him and he had been living quietly with his family in Hyde Park and giving his attention to real estate until March, 1927, when he was kidnapped and held for ransom. He was later released after the ransom had been paid. Although the kidnappers had asked $100,000, it was not believed that he actually paid that amount.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Hattie Lazarus and four brothers, Dan, John, Harry and Ned Lazarus.

MARINES RECALL THEIR BLOODLESS MARCH ON METZ

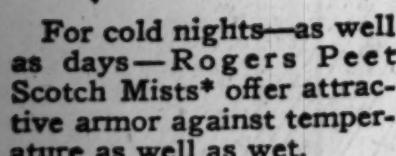

Ten Chicago marines who spent four months on their way to war they never reached and more than twice as long in getting away from it, filled a corner of the Congress hotel with songs of the A. E. F. last night.

The ten were members of the Eleventh Marine regiment. Enlisted together in July, 1918, they left Chicago on July 28, landed in France Oct. 10, spent a month going to the second American army, which never was mobilized, for the Metz offensive that never happened, and returned to Chicago the following August.

The ten were Rudol Schmidt, J. B. Mackey, F. B. Ingledew, R. Klein, Rex H. Morris, Fred Cloyd, W. F. McKinnon, A. L. Lanphear, E. M. Murray, and H. P. Bates.

"LIFE FOR PINT" FRAMING CHARGE INQUIRY ORDERED

Statements by Eastman Cause Furor.

BY ORVILLE DWYER.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
Lansing, Mich., Nov. 22.—(Special.)—This city is in a furor tonight over Fred Eastman's charges that Fred Palm and Eric Mac Miller, Michigan's "life for a pint" prisoners are in the penitentiary as the result of being "framed" and misdeeds by members of the Lansing police force, and John Wendell Bird, Ingham county prosecutor, says he will seek an immediate grand jury investigation of the matter.

Judge Carr said he will ask Judge Land W. Carr, now sitting as a one-man grand jury, to thoroughly investigate the charges, and if he finds Judge Carr cannot do it, he will call a special grand jury to sift them.

Judge Carr, who was out of the city tonight, is sitting in connection with bribery charges against Eastman and William Knapp, Eastman's former partner on the police force. These two men for several years have been known familiarly as Knapp and Eastman, and have formed a team which carried on all prohibition enforcement activities for the local force.

Charges Are Discussed.

Eastman's charges were published in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE yesterday. They created a veritable sensation in Lansing today and tonight. Groups of people all over the district were talking about them and trying to find out what was true. Officials in the police involved in the experiments made denials right and left.

As for Eastman himself, he was called out of bed this morning by Detective Paul Taylor, sent by Chief of Police Alfred Seymour to bring him in.

According to Eastman, his talk with the chief went like this:

CHIEF SEYMOUR—My God, what's all this stuff about now, Eastman?

EASTMAN—What stuff, chief?

CHIEF SEYMOUR—This stuff you've told in the papers. Don't you know you're laying yourself liable to contempt of court?

EASTMAN—No, I don't.

CHIEF SEYMOUR—What's your interest in the Palm and Miller cases? Does your conscience bother you so far as any testimony you gave?

EASTMAN—No, not as to that particularly.

CHIEF SEYMOUR—Why did you go to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE with it; don't you know that's the worst paper you can go to with this kind of a matter?

Wanted to Do Right.

EASTMAN—I went to THE TRIBUNE because I was done here in Michigan, because I've got Richard H. Scott's financial and political influence behind me. And anyway I wanted to do the right thing and help Palm and Miller get pardons and wanted to put this into the mouth of Eastman. I'm more amused than concerned.

To a TRIBUNE staff man, Mr. Scott tonight over the telephone said: "I won't talk to you on any subject." And he hung up.

Men Now Enemies.

By this last, the chief referred to Knapp, Eastman's former partner. The two are now bitter enemies and Eastman claims Knapp framed it so Harry Stavros, a bootlegger, would throw $140 in Eastman's lap so charges of accepting a bribe might be thrown up at Eastman.

"I told the chief I claimed I was framed," Eastman said he answered the chief. "I told him I claimed it in the beginning and was claiming it right now."

The chief then told me I had been quoted in the interview as saying that Richard H. Scott, former head of Anti-Saloon League of Michigan and president of the Red Motor Car company here, was hand picking juries. I told him I had made no such specific charge against Mr. Scott, and that I would go and tell Mr. Scott that.

Interview "All Right."

I went to the company to see Mr. Scott and Chief Seymour also told me to see Walter Foster, Mr. Scott's attorney. While I was waiting to see them I read the interview in THE TRIBUNE. The interview was all right. It stated exactly what I had told. That made me mad and I said to myself, "to — with them, I don't care whether I see them or not," and I walked out without seeing either Mr. Scott or his attorney."

Chief Seymour took the position that Eastman had told "nothing new" in the interview that apparently excited the chief so much.

"Most of the charges Eastman made have been threshed out before

AMENDMENT IS ILLEGAL, FOES OF CUNEO CHARGE

Lawyers Give Arguments Against Tower Plan.

The amendment by which John F. Cuneo claims the right to erect a sixty story building 440 feet high without a setback, topped by a 125 foot tower, is unconstitutional, constitutes an illegal delegation of legislative power to administrative officers, and is void because it was passed without adequate hearing. These were the arguments made yesterday before Chief Justice Taylor of the Circuit court in behalf of three neighboring property owners seeking revocation of Cuneo's building permit in certain tower proceedings.

"The evidence is clear," Attorney Judson said, "and the weight of the law beyond question. This amendment to the ordinance, which was the work of weeks of planning, is unconstitutional because it is based on unreasonable classification and is the grant of special privilege to this one man, or to people up and down Michigan avenue whose property it might be stretched to describe."

Illegal Delegation of Powers.

"Further than that, it constitutes an illegal delegation of legislative power to administrative officers. It leaves such officers to decide what constitutes a park and what constitutes a street. Persons willing to take advantage of the ordinance might easily come within its provisions by dedicating absurdly small parks on a street to come within the provision that only property fronting on three streets, one over 100 feet wide and overlooking a park or waterway, can enjoy an.

"And, beyond that, it exceeds the power of the city council—or, I might say, beyond that, it fails because of the failure to have had a hearing of the sort described in the statute. I also say that the amendment may give the right to go to the 440 foot height, but does not mean to increase the volume limit of the 264 foot limit of the old ordinance."

Fleming Adds to Argument.

Attorney Judson was followed by Attorney Joseph B. Fleming, who amplified on the points stressed by Mr. Judson. Mr. Fleming will continue his argument today.

"It is our contention," Attorney Fleming said, "that the amendment of June 14 is contrary to the purposes, to the letter, to the spirit of the zoning act. It is repugnant to the purposes of zoning regulations. It does not regulate districts, but singles out individual pieces of property for special treatment."

Mr. Fleming reviewed the testimony of witnesses for the property owners in support of his position.

BLAME CAPTAIN OF MARQUETTE FOR SHIP CRASH

Cited to Face Prosecution by United States.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 22.—[Special]—Charged with inattention to duty and negligence in connection with the sinking of the freighter Senator off Port Washington, Oct. 31, with a loss of nine lives, Capt. Walter F. Amesbury, skipper of the Marquette, today was ordered to appear and show cause why he should not be reported to the federal district attorney for criminal prosecution.

That was the decision of the local steamboat inspectors, Capt. Frank W. Van Patten and William A. Collins, who conducted the investigation into the fatal collision. When Capt. Amesbury appears, at 10 a. m., Dec. 10, he must also show cause why his master's license should not be revoked or suspended.

Guilty of Speeding.

The inspectors found both vessels guilty of proceeding at full speed in a dense fog, a violation of rule 15 of the pilot regulations.

"The rules provide that in a heavy fog, a moderate rate of speed shall be maintained," said Mr. Collins. "The fog on this occasion was so dense that the vessels could not see each other or tell the location of each other until it was too late to maneuver in an effort to avoid a collision."

The master of the steamer Senator, Capt. George Kinch, lost his life and consequently cannot be charged. Capt. Amesbury, however, faces charges for running at full speed and for failure to render aid to the crew of the Senator, floating in the waters.

Mentions Failure to Aid Crew.

"Failure to give assistance to the crew of the sunken ship is a matter for the federal district attorney, who has authority to bring criminal charges. It is our duty, however, to report such a violation to the district attorney and we shall ask him to be present at the trial of Capt. Amesbury."

The citation to Capt. Amesbury follows:

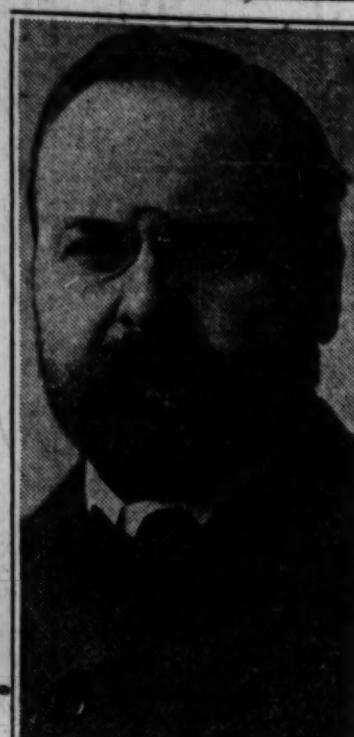

"In review of the testimony taken during our investigation of the Marquette-Senator collision case, we find that in our opinion the primary cause of the collision was due to both steamers being navigated at full speed in a dense, heavy fog, in violation of rule 15 of the laws relating to navigation of vessels. We have, therefore, to prefer charges for inattention to duty and negligence as set forth in this.

Blamed for Collision.

"Specification: That you did so navigate the steamer Marquette on Oct. 31, 1929, for several hours previous to 11:40 a. m. eastern standard time, in the waters of Lake Michigan, at or near a point approximately twenty miles east of Port Washington, Wis., so as to cause the said vessel to collide with the steamer Senator, resulting in the loss of nine lives and of over $100,000 damage, and you are hereby charged with inattention to duty and negligence, in that you navigated the steamer Marquette at full speed in a heavy fog in direct violation of rule 15 of the laws relating to the navigation of vessels.

MILLERS TOLD U. S. PLANS TO HELP FARMER

The government's plans to make millers pay more for their wheat in the future were outlined by the National Federation of Wheat Flour Millers yesterday by Samuel R. McElvie, former governor of Nebraska and wheat member of the federal farm board, at the federation's semi-annual conference in the Congress hotel.

Mr. McElvie said the government hoped to bring about mass selling, collective bargaining, the stabilization of agriculture and the elimination of waste in farming, which would result in better prices for the farmer. He told how 12,000 farmers' cooperative organizations have been consolidated into one large chain, which will make the farmer master of the market situation instead of a mere order taker.

"There is no thought of fixing prices in this," he said. "The idea is to have one of obtaining fair prices governed by market conditions. Neither will the farmers reduce their output but will attempt to find new uses and create new demands for their products."

For the last ten years he had been in the insurance business with offices at 35 W. Dearborn street. ## VICTIMIZING THE RAILROADS.

L. A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central, is the latest to protest against congressional abuse of the power to regulate interstate commerce. He was thinking especially of such acts as the Houch-Smith resolution which directed that rates on farm products be lowered as a measure of farm relief. He objected, as well, to the habit of taking away from the railroads the profits which had been earned through costly improvements and economies.

The protest is justified. Railroad legislation and regulation has been the delight of wild Jacobism for generations. A favorite theory has been that the railroads, if not responsible for depression in particular industries, must, in any event, right the balance with subsidies. A manufacturer who located his factory in the wrong place with respect to his raw materials and his markets might obtain relief even if the relief was granted at the expense of the railroads and of competitors who had had the foresight to locate their plants strategically. Because farmers were in difficulties their burden was to be passed on to the railroads which might or might not succeed in redistributing the loss among other shippers.

Congress, when faced with the problem of adjusting the economic balance, has frequently sought to adjust it at the expense of the railroads. Railroad managements which have succeeded in earning profits in spite of congress have been threatened continually with the loss of their rightful gain. No other industry in the United States has been as exposed to the attacks of demagogues and congressional witch hunters. President Downs, on behalf of his industry, rightly called for a new and fairer deal for transportation in this country.

NOT IN A PALACE.

No doubt hospitality and the desire to show the highest honor to the assembled representatives of the great powers has actuated King George in offering St. James' palace as a place of meeting for the conference on naval limitation. But we think a place less impressive in its influence and in its suggestion of British greatness would be more suitable. Observing for many years the susceptibility of our own countrymen to such environments and the influences they express, we should feel better assured of their state of mind and of their accomplishments if the conference took place at the Hotel Capil.

CHICAGO IN ARCHITECTURE.

Meers, Holabird and Root, the Chicago architects, were guests of honor at a recent banquet given by New York architects. Remarks made at banquets can generally be discounted without damage to the facts, but we believe that the tribute paid Chicago architecture and its exponents was sincere. Moreover, we believe it was merited. The tribute was paid by Mr. Raymond Hood, president of the Architectural League of New York. Mr. Hood was one of the architects of The Tribune Tower and is a member of the architectural commission for the approaching World's Fair. He has reason to feel kindly toward Chicago, but Mr. Hood is above all a craftsman and as such we know him to be incapable of self-flattery in a matter concerning his craft.

What Mr. Hood said was this: "New York has the same more or less amused and patronizing interest in Chicago that Paris and London have always had in New York, but those of us who have had occasion to go west during the last few years have begun to feel more or less uneasy. . . . In my own case I have ceased wondering whether Chicago would catch on to what we were doing and have begun to wonder if we are going to catch on to what they are doing. I have been seeing building after building out there that has a freshness, vigor and architectural solidity that startles me."

Many of the buildings which Mr. Hood found uplifting must have been the work of Holabird and Root, to whom Chicago is vastly indebted. Their Palmolive building, 323 North Michigan avenue, and the Daily News building, particularly in its east facade, are achievements which we believe New York cannot match. Less massive but no less finished a performance is found in their Chicago Woman's club, a building whose interior may make architectural history. The Baskin building on State street and Tobey building on Michigan avenue have set a new style in smaller mercantile buildings, a style characteristic of Chicago and the twentieth century. The work of Holabird and Root has been ably seconded by the contributions among others of Mr. Philip Maher on North Michigan avenue and Mr. Ernest Grunfeld, whose planetarium on the lake front is now nearing completion.

Chicago today presents to architects much the same inspiration which Louis Sullivan found here in the decades which followed the great fire. The city is alive, virile, eager to build, and willing to experiment in new forms. Stockholm and Venice are superb, but they are small cities. Of the world's great cities, Paris is Chicago's only rival, but Paris is built and it is not destined to grow or to change significantly. Chicago is of the present and the future. Let any doubters catch a glimpse of the city from one of its high towers by night or view the mass of lighted towers from below.

THE POSTOFFICE AND THE PRESIDENT'S BUILDING CAMPAIGN.

Chicago is now advised that the new postoffice will not be started until next summer. This position is indefensible. The government has title to the property; appropriations for initial construction have been made; the firm of architects which has been commissioned for the work has submitted preliminary drawings and is prepared to complete the working drawings without delay. But Washington officials are slow in arranging the floor plans and arbitrating the claims of departments to office space.

We have waited patiently while the real obstacles to the postoffice were being disposed of, but, now that the project is held back only by the bickering of bureaucrats, we are fully justified in expressing exasperation. President Hoover has promised that a vast program of public improvement will be undertaken at this time to supplement the investments in building which private industry is planning. Inasmuch as the important problems have been solved, the Chicago postoffice should be the first project on the government's program. The request of the bureaucrats for another six months to plan the layouts for the departments is prompted by inordinate incompetence or inexcusable jealousy among Washington and Chicago officials. The President is constitutionally impotent with this trifling procedure and we hope that he will intervene so that the architects immediately may be authorized to complete the working drawings and excavation started this winter.

TRANSPORTATION ON THE LAKES.

Those who read John Steele's report of the splendid transportation service in the English channel must have been impressed with the inferiority of navigation facilities in Lake Michigan. Operators of the channel fleets are engaged in a healthy competition to provide fast, safe, luxurious, and modern accommodations for passengers, while Lake Michigan navigation companies are content with the income which their antiquated properties can be forced to produce.

The series of disasters which have come to lake vessels recently has emphasized the obsolescence of most of the boats on the lake. The rundown condition of the Lake Michigan fleet is depressing to water traffic here. There is small inducement to shippers and passengers to use water transportation when other available methods are more convenient. Unless the navigation interests here start an ambitious program of new construction to elevate Lake Michigan shipping to the standards obtaining elsewhere we may expect a progressive decrease in the volume of lake travel.

AMERICAN RELATIONS WITH SOUTH AFRICA.

Mr. Ralph J. Totten is the first minister to South Africa from the United States. Formerly consul general at Cape Town, Mr. Totten was elevated to this higher office on its creation. Recently Mr. Erik Louw presented his credentials at the White House as the first envoy to America from South Africa. Thus the state department is represented with the same dignity in South Africa as it is in Canada and the Irish Free State.

This tribute of official America to the Union of South Africa is justified by the friendly sentiments of the American people for the progressive citizens of South Africa. We recognize a comradeship with the South Africans in their ideal of liberty. We respect the administrative accomplishments in war and peace of Botha, the generalship of Smuts and Van Deventer. We sympathize with the business standards and the enterprise of South Africa and we are confident that the commerce between South Africa and America, which has been to the prosperity of both, will flourish and increase under a spirit of the highest mutual goodwill.

VALUE OF HOT SPRINGS.

In the treatment of syphilis taking the baths at Hot Springs is of great value. This is the conclusion of a carefully checked study made by Drs. O. C. Wenger and Joseph Boltan of the Public Health Service. Cases who received specific medical treatment, and had the baths in addition, improved with great rapidity. Similar cases that had the baths, but had no specific medical treatment, did not improve satisfactorily. The improvement in the laboratory field as shown by laboratory tests was outstanding. Cases that were poorly Wassermann positive or Kahn positive, speedily became negative.

The baths were given in degrees during the first week. The temperature of the bath water was raised one degree a week until 105, the maximum, was reached. This degree of heat was not passed because of its effect on the diastolic blood pressure, an observation which may have a value in another field.

When the diastolic blood pressure drops rapidly to a low level the subject is liable to faint. If death comes for the reason that such cases it is because of the great and sudden fall in diastolic blood pressure. If a person gets into a bath that is overly warm he has a drop in diastolic pressure. It is probable that some of the bathroom fatalities are the result directly or indirectly of the effect of the heat on diastolic blood pressure.

On the other hand, in darkness due to high blood pressure a hot bath, say at about 104 to 105, may give temporary relief. Eventually, people with chronic high blood pressure may find it advisable to go occasionally to Hot Springs bath for a period of temporary improvement.

Because they were cautious and prudent, Drs. Wenger and Boltan made use of baths in the temperatures of 100 to 105 or less. They confirmed previous observers who have reported that taking a hot bath caused the temperature of the body to rise one or more degrees. A mild temporary fever was produced. This probably did good rather than harm. There was also an increase in pulse rate and rate of breathing.

I used to drink lemon juice in hot water without sugar before breakfast, and once in a great while I enjoy a raw lemon without sugar.

ITALY PUTS PARIS 'ON SPOT' IN DRIVE FOR NAVY PARITY

Wields Submarine Threat Over France's Head.

(This is the first of a series of three articles on Italy's struggle for naval parity with France and its bearing on the London five power conference in January.)

BY DAVID DARAH.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)
ROME, Nov. 22.—Conversations between France and Italy over their respective naval needs, which the two Mediterranean powers will present at the London five power naval conference, will be resumed within a few days. These conversations, which were begun this week between the Italian ambassador, Mansoni, and Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, were temporarily interrupted because M. Briand asked for clarification of the Italian position. The Rome government is now preparing a reply.

Parties to Be Diplomatic.

Reports here say the resumed discussions will at first be merely diplomatic and some time will elapse before technicians are called in. The French ambassador, De Beaumarchais, has left Rome for Paris to see M. Briand.

Much anxiety is felt here over the success of these conversations with France because of the bearing which an agreement between France and Italy will have on the success of the London conference. Unless some agreement is reached over the Italian demand for parity with France and over the question of submarines, it is believed that a general five power agreement will be difficult to achieve.

The Italian government proposed these preliminary conversations with France on Oct. 16. The delay in holding them apparently was caused by the fall of the French government and also the fact that the French experts had not yet formulated the position that would maintain.

Send Up "Trial Balloons."

The delay has been mainly uneventful, which was accounted for sending what is called in European politics "trial balloons." The first of these was to the effect that Italy sought parity with France only for prestige and did not intend to build up to the French strength. The second was the suggestion of a Mediterranean Locarno, with England as the arbiter between France and Italy. Both of these trial balloons, from French or English sources, were repudiated officially.

The conversations between Italy and France have now been hastened by Prince Mussolini's third trial balloon that Italy might agree to abdication of submarines.

Italy is adamant on the question of parity with France, which she sees as analogous to the parity question between England and the United States. On the other hand, Italian circles understand that the French position, either with regard to Italy or with regard to the London conference, has not been definitely devised.

Two French Schools.

One of the French naval schools wants to repudiate entirely the Washington parity precedent with Italy on capital ships, it is said. The other French school would set a higher naval need than Italy, because of lack of resources, could not build up to.

Both schools are agreed that submarines must not be discussed at London, and their technicians are searching for a formula which will adequately cover the case, according to the parity viewpoint.

Meanwhile, Italy is wielding her position on submarines as a means of getting the French to come around to the parity viewpoint.

REPLACING WIRES
KNOTTY PROBLEM
IN CAR DEBATES

One of the important problems to be overcome before an agreement is reached on a transit franchise concerns the cost of relocating underground wires, conduits, water and gas inlets, and sewers, Attorney Sidney Gorman, special counsel for the city, said yesterday in answer to reports that the settlement was endangered thereby.

"Of course, the success of our negotiations depends on the ability of the city to finance the cost of the subway," Attorney Gorman declared. "If the city has to pay the additional cost, estimated at $24,000,000, for removing and later restoring the utility and city service carriers, we may be hampered in our negotiations."

The object has been under consideration for several days by the group framing suitable provisions for the franchise. There is a legal question involved and much may depend on what the Supreme court will hold."

The question arose during the negotiations between the city and the telephone company for a new franchise. Attorneys Benjamin F. Goldstein and George L. Haight, special counsel for the city on telephone litigation and franchise matters, raised the point in seeking to have an agreement that the telephone company would pay its own costs in taking up its apparatus during subway digging, maintaining service meanwhile.

500 H. S. Students from Springfield Visit Chicago

Five hundred high school students from Springfield arrived in Chicago yesterday morning over the Chicago & Alton for a sightseeing tour. The educational tour was one of a group being conducted by the Chicago & Alton to enable school children from down-state cities to visit Chicago. The party was taken to various places of interest in buses during the day and returned to Springfield last night. More than 16,000 children have been brought to Chicago on the tour in the last few months.

SNOOK IS GRANTED STAY OF EXECUTION BY OHIO HIGH COURT

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Dr. James H. Snook, under sentence of death for the murder of Theora K. Hix, will be given an indefinite stay of execution pending a review of his case before the State Supreme court. Chief Justice Carrington T. Marshall of the state's highest tribunal told attorneys for the condemned man late today.

Judge Marshall made this statement at a conference with Snook's counsel and Prosecutor John J. Chester Jr. today, after the second district Court of Appeals had refused the former Ohio State university professor's plea for a new trial.

The justice instructed E. O. Elliott, attorney for the abolition of the death penalty, to file a motion for leave to file a petition in error, alleging maltrial, and a petition of right, in which it is expected that attorneys for Snook will set forth federal grounds for a later appeal to the United States Supreme court.

The chief justice declared he would refuse the stay in the event that all petitions are not filed Monday and all questions laid before the court simultaneously.

Attorney Chester said he would waive all procedure to prevent the stay, since the scheduled date of execution is set for Nov. 23.

Applaud Retired Diplomat.

Mr. Kellogg spoke at the Pilgrims' banquet. This Anglo-American organization is devoted to promoting friendly relations between the two great English speaking nations. Many present had heard him address the society before, when he was its guest in the days of his youth. The plaudits he received tonight, however, were even heartier than on the previous occasion, for he stood before them as one of the co-authors with French Foreign Minister Briand of the Kellogg pact for the outlawry of war. His hearers comprised diplomats of 26 nations and over 200 prominent members of the American colony and British public life.

"In my judgment, one of the most important problems now confronting the nations," declared Mr. Kellogg, "is the question of reduction, limitation of armaments. I say reduction and limitation because, however ideal complete disarmament might be, we must look at these reforms from a practical standpoint. The world is not yet ready for disarmament."

"Competitive building inevitably is a great inducement to war. No treaty which provides for or contemplates an increase of armament will meet the situation."

WORLD NOT YET READY TO DROP SWORD—KELLOGG

Tells Pilgrims Reduction Is First Practical Step.

BY JOHN STEELE.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

London, Nov. 22.—[Special Correspondence.]—The latest young author to write his autobiography is Robert Graves, and from what I hear of Mr. Graves this should be a remarkable work.

For one thing, Mr. Graves has known everybody in the modern literary "swirl"; for another he is a man whose contacts are inclusive; and third he has had experience of several distinct types of life. He has written much charming poetry, has lectured other poets upon their work, and has been a professor in the University of Cairo.

The friend of Mr. Masefield, the colleague of Siegfried Sassoon, Robert Nichols, and W. J. Turner, the son-in-law of William Nicholson, he has an acquaintance with both letters and men which will stand comparison with that of anybody of his age. The book, which should be published before the end of the year, will disappoint me if it is not among the freshest and most interesting of its kind.

Aldous Huxley has just announced, in his book of essays, "Do What You Will," that he is done with being up to date. He no longer wishes to be "in the swim," as he says, but is all for living his own life.

Mr. Huxley has been one of the wisest, as he is one of the best, of writers. After he had seen the world of the aesthetes of London, he removed himself from it and made buoyant fun of it. That is why, among the really highbrow aesthetes of London, he is not really quite approved. He has too much sense of humor, and is too irreverent regarding the high priests and priestesses of Bloomsbury and Chelsea to be popular with them to whom such a gift is a source of danger. His continued residence in Italy, his wide range of travel and knowledge, and his impatience with literary "bunk" cause him to be a natural free lance.

The new book of essays, just published here, is proof of all those qualities which his most sincere admirers admire most.

It is full of hard knocks, but I think it reveals a growth in Mr. Huxley's mind. He is tired of fussiness, and is ready to keep away from it. He is also bold upon thinking things out for himself, and when he does so, as he does here, and with as much brilliancy as he always commands (unlike some of our laborious wits) without effort, he is the most stimulating companion of his time. He is the Shaw of the nineteen-twenty-thirties.

"Therefore, I am hopeful that progress is going to be made in reduction of naval armaments and that it will be followed by reductions in land armaments."

Mr. Kellogg emphatically scouted all possibility of armed conflict between the United States and Britain and spoke feelingly of Premier MacDonald's recent journey to visit President Hoover.

Dr. Meyer, who formerly had Dr. Kemp as assistant at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, where Meyer's psychiatrist, and Dr. William White, who also was formerly associated with Dr. Kemp, died, has been called in to Stanley McCormick's rehabilitation before an interested audience in which lawyers and principals predominated.

One method which Dr. Meyer and Dr. August Hoch employed from 1907 to 1927 in treating their patient included what Dr. Meyer called "efforts to neutralize the presence of McCormick's wife." Mrs. McCormick was advised to absent herself and in accordance with the physician's orders she did not see him for years. But when improvement gradually began to manifest itself, the wife was allowed to visit her husband again in the walled estate, Raven Rock, near here.

Witness Cross-Examined.

Newton D. Baker cross-examined the witness for the wife, who sat at an opposite wall of the courtroom from Harold F. McCormick and Cyrus McCormick, and his son, Dr. Kemp, tried to pin Meyer down to a description of Dr. Kemp as a disciple of Freud and carried the witness through a lengthy recital of Freud theories as carried out in psychoanalyzing patients.

Authors Tell
How Chicago's
Story Was Done

With Speed Typical of This Hurrying City.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.
Lloyd Lewis and Henry Justin Smith, co-authors of "Chicago, the History of Its Reputation" (Harcourt), were guests of the Society of Midland Authors the other night. They both told how the book came to be written and how it took shape. Mr. Smith said the collaborators were so busy, even with a life sized job of research, that they had to leave the strokes on "Myths After Lincoln" (and he might have said himself with "Poor Devil It"), that after a few meetings in an obscure restaurant, where they wouldn't be found and where they could talk without interruption and outline their plan, they never talked about the book or saw the other's manuscript until almost the time that it was sent to the publisher.

It took them six months to gather the material and write the book, just about the length of time that schoolmen Shakespeare devoted to much of his plays. Mr. Lewis supplemented Mr. Smith's remarks by saying the reason the book holds together, despite the fact that the two parts were written completely separately, is because both of the authors, when they came to dig into the material, were fired by the romantic possibilities which confronted them. Chicago's reputation was international. To much of Europe it had a thrill which no other part of America had.

The true spirit of the American pioneer was most obvious in its astonishing history, and the authors felt that, to make the book beyond the confines of mere local history, they would have to record that spirit and set it down in print. It was not their idea to explain or condone or plead for Chicago, but to let its history speak its own piece. Mr. Smith said when he came to look at his part of the task—the writing of the history from the world's fair of 1893 to the present day—he had to rely a great deal on his memory, but that the high spot of the whole book is Mr. Lewis' graphic picture of the great fire. [Mr. Lewis came to Chicago to live in 1915]. Mr. Lewis countered with the assurance that the picture of the volume is Mr. Smith's picture of William Hale Thompson, sitting in his office and reviewing and regressing his life.

Newspaper men are supposed to be hard hearted and headed, but they were fired—the book is evidence of that—by the material which they found. That is why, of course, "Chicago, the History of Its Reputation" is such a grand book for the reader. Enthusiasm is the most contagious germ in literature.

Book of Antique Ideas,
but Recently Off Presses

In "Women and Society" (Longman Green) Merril Booth is all for woman's place, being in the home with only the few exceptions where a woman is a genius. Page Virginie Woolf, who in "A Room of One's Own" points out very plainly that when a woman does nothing but be in the home there is no chance of her ever showing whether she is a genius.

Mr. Booth sees nothing but social disaster as a result of woman's trying to take man's place in the world. He thinks that her talent for creating a home is a greater talent than one for creating art.

Men have an instinct to enjoy a home, he says, seldom to make one. Heigh ho. There once was a time when learned articles were written about the unwomanliness of women's casting votes. And a lot of people believed them, too. Mr. Booth's book has the charm of an antique.

BLACK ART DABBERS STILL ROAM WORLD, THIS AUTHOR INSISTS

"Witches Still Live," by Theda Kenyon (Washburn), is an elaboration of the thesis stated in its title. Miss Kenyon has made a study for years of witchcraft, both ancient and modern, and she claims that in one form or another, there still is a good deal of bewitching being done in the present day.

Rasputin is only one of the internationally known ones.

"The witch cult," she says, "is as organized today as it was in the middle ages . . . The most casual examination will show that there are societies of Satanists in England, France, Italy, and Germany. Moreover, there are hundreds of 'believers' free of any organization whatever. Yet they carry on the old faiths, the old rituals."

"In many a church, the Host has been stolen from the tabernacle too often to give any other explanation than the continued celebration of the Black Mass."

The tale of the modern manifestations of witchcraft, but the most interesting part of the book is the rapid survey of witchcraft through history.

"American Caravan" Starts Second Trip with Authors' Cargoes

"The New American Caravan," edited by Alfred Kreyberg, Lewis Mumford, and Paul Rosenfeld (Macmillan), has been reduced in size for its second appearance and has become, with this volume, an established rather than an experimental third American letters. The first American Caravan, received excellent critical comment, and so filled young writers with confidence that more than 3,400 manuscripts were submitted for the second. The Caravan published material for the first time, stories, poems, essays, drama, every type of American literature.

The index of authors of this new volume includes such names as E. E. Cummings, S. Guy Endore [who has said to be the first biography of the author], John Galsworthy, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Wallace Gould, Paul Green, winner of the Pulitzer drama prize, Matthew Josephson, Robert McAlmon, Isidor Schneider, Evelyn Scott, Marjorie Allen Seiffert, Jean Toomer, and Yvor Winters, besides many others.

No one interested in American letters can disregard the American Caravan, just because it is what it is. So far the standard of contributions has been very high, even if no genius has bloomed in its pages.

Too Often Child of High School Age Is Over-Crowded

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

This letter presents a situation that is a frequent source of worry to the parents of high school boys and girls, and to the boys and girls themselves: "We have a problem on which we would appreciate any suggestion you may be able to give. My daughter started to high school this fall. The work is difficult for her and we are quite unhappy about it."

"She is a good girl and we faithful and anxious to succeed. She is 14. School opens at 8:15 and continues till 2 p.m., with only one-half hour for lunch. She comes home at 4 p.m. to begin to prepare her assignments for the next day. She works until 6, then has dinner and after dinner works another hour and a half."

"With all this hard work she gets grades of 'fair.' She has no time for recreation, and the fact that other brighter friends are able to get higher marks with less study worries her. She lives in dread of failure."

"Surely this is all wrong and will ruin her character, and perhaps her health, also. Could you tell us of a private school, where the groups are smaller, and where she could get more individual attention at school? A school, perhaps, with hours longer than those at the high school would be necessary, so that the poor child would be free after dinner to enjoy relaxation, perhaps to read or play the piano for pleasure. It would need to be a school which would prepare for college, as the plan is for her to take up college work on completing high school. The child has no physical defect, as far as we know."

Unfortunately there are many parents who are still in ignorance of what is being done to this child. On the whole, the home study required during these four years is hard on the endurance of many boys and girls of normal intelligence and even more than normal, and leaves them too little time for outdoors, recreation and sleep. The general cure for that, of course, is just home work.

Before long most high and preparatory schools will come to realize that education goes forward better and faster without the amount of grilling academic work required now. However, it is this present, not that future, that we have to face.

The dangers this writer points out to her daughter's health, happiness, and even character are quite pertinent. There are several ways possible to avoid them. The public high school is an excellent one. There are various sources of available information about such schools. For instance, your nearby colleges, which are in touch with many preparatory schools, would be able to give their names and academic standing.

If one cannot afford a private school it is possible for girls or boys to become special students in the public high school, in the way that can move along with their own circumstances and have their companionship even if they do not graduate at the same time. By taking one year more of special work they can obtain their diploma a year later.

Now, about these students going to college, as is mentioned in the letter. If high school is a strain, college may be still more, and is not the whole answer. Still, special work can be done. There. If the girl or boy has a bent in any direction, he or she might begin to develop that talent at once, in a school which specializes in that special work—physical training, music, business training, the trades, the arts, or whatever it may be. Whether these suggestions or others are followed, the fact stands out that it is most important that the health and self-confidence of boys and girls in this age should not be impaired.

TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

BY JANE EDDINGTON.

Rabbit Cookery.

A representative of the United States department of agriculture wrote to us last May in reference to the use of rabbits as food, and enclosed some leaflets on the subject. One is leaflet number 4 on "Raising Domestic Rabbits," and the last part of this is a page of recipes, five of them. Also there came along two pages of mimeographed material on the rabbit, with five recipes. Between the two we can learn two different ways of frying rabbit, two ways of fricasseeing it, two ways of making a rabbit pie and how to boil and bake and smother rabbit and to make rabbit stew with vegetables.

The general information from one of the assistants in the bureau of home economics is to the effect that young, tender rabbits may be fried or broiled, or just a little larger than a frying and broiling stage, smothered according to the methods southern cooks use for chicken. The older, larger rabbits may be parboiled whole, then cut into pieces suitable for serving, and fried in batter, or they may be simmered and served with dumplings, and they may be used in chop suey or salad in the same way chicken is.

In a sense the rabbit meat is a by-product of the present day commercial rabbit industry, but if you will read the advertisements of the food stores you will find that rabbit meat has become almost a staple with some of them.

The home economics woman starts the introduction to her recipes as follows. "The domestic rabbit provides meat that is delicious, tender and fine flavored. One does not have to wait for the hunting season to open to enjoy rabbit, for there are hundreds of domestic rabbit farms throughout the country, where the animals are being raised for the market. Hutch raised rabbits are produced under the best possible conditions and are marketed while young and tender. Relatively few housewives in the eastern part of the United States are acquainted with the delicious flavor of domestic rabbit meat."

Following this there is a comparison between the domestic and the jack or wild rabbit, which has a gamey flavor and too often contains lead shot to grit one's teeth on.

Louise Tyler,
Fiance, Feted;
to Wed Nov. 27

BY THALIA
With her wedding only a few days away now, Louise Tyler is attending a gay succession of parties given for her and her fiance, William Steinwedell of Cleveland, O., by members of their bridal party.

The ceremony is to be performed next Wednesday afternoon at St. Chrysostom's at 5 o'clock, with the new rector, the Rev. Stephen Keefer, officiating, and with a small reception at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Ralph Martin Shaw, and Mr. Shaw following.

Mrs. George W. Burgess of Greenwich, Conn., who was to have been the matron of honor, is prevented by illness from being present, and so Mrs. Claire Childs Laddin, who was originally to be one of the bridesmaids, will serve in her stead, and Mrs. Stephen Y. Hord is added to the bridesmaids, who include also Mrs. Barrett Scudder, Mrs. Gardner Hammond, and Mrs. G. Corson Ellis. Mr. and Mrs. James H. Douglas Jr. gave a dinner and theater party on Wednesday evening, and the other prenuptial festivities include a dinner the Ellises are giving at the Brookwood Hunt club this evening, luncheon at the Hords' Lake Forest residence, and a dinner to be given by the Henry Fields tomorrow, and a dinner Mrs. Laddin and Mrs. Hammond are to give at the Petruska club on Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw are to give the bridal dinner on Tuesday evening at the Saddle and Cycle club. J. Britton Setzer is to be best man for Mr. Steinwedell, and the ushers will include Prince "Nick" Galitsin, Ned Stone, Elliott Donnelly, who married the groom's sister, the former Ann Steinwedell, about a year ago; Louis Cody Jr., Ralph Laddin, Steve Jr., Thomas H. Tyler, and William Fosterer of New York City. Following their marriage, Mr. Steinwedell and his bride are to live in Cleveland.

Mrs. Frank O. Lowden has purchased tickets for 10 children from an institution for this morning's performance of the Junior League's "Patchwork Girl of Oz" at the Selwyn theater, and Miss Harriet McLaughlin will be hostess to a group of five youngsters.

Reservations have also been made by Mrs. Chauncey McCormick, Mrs. Homer Dixon, Mrs. John N. Dole, Mrs. James E. Ott Jr., Mrs. Edwin Welch, Mrs. W. David Owen, Mrs. Gustav Hessert and Mrs. Bernard Rogers. Mrs. Howard Peabody, who plays the role of Dorothy in the show, has reserved the third row for her son and two daughters and a group of their friends.

The Howard Peabody will give a tea tomorrow afternoon at their Lake Forest residence for Frank O. Salisbury, who recently completed a portrait of Mrs. Peabody. The occasion

Actual Artists Make Palette-Chisel Club Show Delight Critic

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

One of the gayest and least pretentious exhibitions in the galleries today is the small sketch exhibit at the Palette and Chisel club. Once a year the artist members of the Palette and Chisel club contribute sketches and small pictures to be sold for the benefit of the organization.

One's first impression is of color, the second of brightness. An atmosphere of cheerfulness, one always lacking in a modernist room, stamps this at once as a normal, pleasant gathering of intelligible interpretations of normal living. There are landscapes, figure studies, and still life. Possibly the three most exquisite pictures are those submitted by Oscar D. Soellner—"Symphony in Values," "The Willow," and "The Mill Stream."

James Topping has a bright, brisk, snappy canvas, full of fall color and the chill of frost in "By the Lake."

Joseph Tomaszek shows several beautiful landscapes made a little unreal by the interpolation of figures. Edwin Terwilliger contributes the picturesque "Rolling Hills" and Leo Marzola has three poetic landscapes, of which possibly the loveliest is "Primavera."

Maurice Greenberg offers three portraits and Stark Davis shows "Ghosts." Wings, a flying figure of timber birds, is a work of pure color; Ottmar Hoser is represented by three foreign sketches, "The Three Geese" and the "Brittany Ferry" being particularly decorative. John A. Spelman is responsible for several gorgeous landscapes, and Oscar B. Ericson shows a pleasing series of four.

Among the other painters represented are Otto Hake, Oskar Gross, Edward T. Griggs, Anthony Butcha, C. Curry Esham, and Samuel Avery. The last named offers six exceptionally beautiful sketches.

The exhibition will continue through Dec. 12. *

The Road to Rome"
Starts American
Theater in Paris

PARIS, Nov. 22.—(P)—"The Road to Rome," a play with a New York cast, opened before a large audience tonight at the Theatre Femina in the Champs Elysees, starting the first American theatrical season in Paris. McKay Morris played Hannibal and Jessie Ralph Fahey.

It was the gala opening of the Paris-American players, directed by Carol M. Sax, known in America for productions with Morris Gest, Margaret Anglin, George Tyler, and the Shuberts, and founder of Baltimore's Vagabond Players.

Backed by a group of wealthy Americans, the Players will give six recent American successes, bringing some of the more prominent members of the original casts to Paris for each play.

Each of the six plays is to run two weeks. After "The Road to Rome," George E. Miller's "The Torchbearers," Kenneth Nicholson's "The Barker," Eugene O'Neill's "Desire Under the Elms," Gilda Varens' "Enter, Madam," and E. A. Thomas' "Just Suppose" will be given.

The enterprise has received the unofficial encouragement of the ministry of fine arts.

Afternoon Skirts Win Approval in Many Ways

BY LOLITA.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence)—Our afternoon skirts have come down—thanks to the Paris chute. Yes, they have made a safe landing and our only interest is in the variety of methods taken by the French designers to diversify these approved long skirts.

One may mention only a few. There is the familiar curved seaming over the hips which releases a flared gored at the hem line. There, as in a famous model from Martial et Armand, is the upper skirt section laid in broad bands which are cut in one, with dipping godets. The tunic top to which is attached a plaited and irregular flounce is another bright idea which may be attributed to Martial et Armand.

Today we show yet another manner of making trim new longer skirts look different. This one is in wide stripes and is made to wrap around style. It is topped by a curving yoke individualized by broad plaited and at the side occurs a bow of self material.

As for the corsage, this goes into reverse with the same idea. For here the curving broad plait go in the opposite direction from those of the skirt. Also does a bow at the right front (contrario) that on the left side of the skirt. The medium of this frock is crepe marocain in either black or white.

Aside from such ingeniously cut skirts we find many simplified types. Chanel, for example, in some of her most widely known black marocain models, sponsors a simple flare skirt which she may or may not top with a tunic.

PATTERNS BY CLOTLILDE

WOMAN'S AND MISSES' DRESS.

Chic details are evident in this tiered model. The swathed hip with the crystal buckle emphasizes the higher waistline—so important just now—while the irregular closing of the collarless neckline is unusually becoming. A buttoned, applied trimming band holding the jabot frill, denotes new interest. The direction of the skirt sway gracefully with every movement of the wearer. Transparent velvet, crepe satin, crepe Elizabeth, and Canton crepe will any of them be suitable.

The pattern, 3015, comes in sizes 16 and 18 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 38 requires 3 1/2 yards of 39 inch material.

LARGE AIR LINES DISCUSS PULLING UP STAKES HERE

Can't Get Room at Field to Operate Planes.

BY ROBERT WOOD.

Chicago's backwardness in the development of municipal airport facilities has sent the major air lines into the hinterlands to look for room to set up operating bases, a survey of development in air lines showed yesterday. As a result, the general offices, repair shops, and storage hangars of lines whose chief business is Chicago air traffic are now established in outlying cities.

Unable to expand hangar facilities because of inadequate leases and unwilling to fly more airplanes into an airport already dangerously congested, operators have curtailed their activities to such an extent that the city is in danger of becoming a junction point rather than a central terminal in air transportation. Operators have seriously considered moving out in a

Several Consider Moving.

"Several of the larger companies have discussed pulling up stakes at the municipal airport and moving to some outlying city where we can get some room to expand," one operator stated privately yesterday. "If one of the big mail carriers goes the rest will have to follow because the big portion of the air mail in Chicago is interline traffic. The air mail is flexible. Air lines don't have to lay rails or purchase rights of way, so we're not tied to Chicago or any other city. It would be quite possible to go outside of Chicago, set up a general base, and ferry the mail in. And that's ing sets in and the snow flies. There were several bad crack-ups last winter when pilots tried to make landings on the short runways by using their brakes.

Other Companies Move.

Within the last six months other lines, looking for room to expand, have moved their operations bases from Chicago. Interstate Air Lines, flying the mail from Chicago to Atlanta and from Louisville to St. Louis, closed up shop and went to Evansville, Ind.

The Embry-Riddle company, operators of the mail line from Chicago to Cincinnati, have their headquarters in Cincinnati, although the chief source of business is Chicago. Northwest Airways, running from here to the Twin Cities, have their offices and shops in Minneapolis. Thompson Aeromarine, flying the mail from Chicago to various points in northern Michigan, have only hangar space here, conducting all operations from Kalamazoo, Mich.

The Boeing system, which with National Air Transport carries the bulk of the cross-country mail, maintains only enough hangar space here to house an extra ship or two over night. The company's plans for a large hangar and operations base here have been abandoned because the city has failed to grant leases long enough to make a major investment feasible.

Up to the Officials.

Officials of aviation interests agreed yesterday that much of the future of air transport development here depends on the attitude shown by the board of education and the city toward the proposal which is now before them calling for a long term lease of all unused land in the section now occupied by the municipal airport.

President Caldwell of the school board indicated yesterday that the board would be sympathetic to the present proposal, which will come before the trustees at their Wednesday meeting.

"I see no reason why the board would refuse to grant the city leases on the same terms which we could get from private interests," he said.

"There is no question that the airport needs more room. If the schools can turn over the desired land without jeopardizing their interests, it should be done."

"We can't suffer along here much longer with the present facilities," William Blies, manager of operations for Universal stated yesterday. "We have been considering the idea of continental passenger ships and most of the mail ships here, but we can't keep it up because there is no room for expansion. Bringing more ships here increases congestion and the congested traffic here now is dangerous.

If you, for one, have sought an electric refrigerator that completely divorces from your mind all worry as to the proper care of food, you will find your highest expectations realized in this new Kelvinator.

Nothing to Regulate—
100% Automatic

Kelvinator, never deviating from its path of making electric refrigeration even more trouble-free, more convenient and more economical, has designed its newest product to be 100% automatic in operation.

There is nothing to regulate—whether you want speedy freezing of ice cubes and desserts or delicate foods kept at their palatable best for hours and days at a time.

Ice-O-Thermic Tubes —A Startling Advance In Electric Refrigeration

water in a special ice compartment concentrates intense freezing power in this direction. Ice is ready in a remarkably short time. Desserts in a correspondingly brief period. Yet food compartments remain always at the same safe temperature—between 40 and 50 degrees—neither too warm nor too cold.

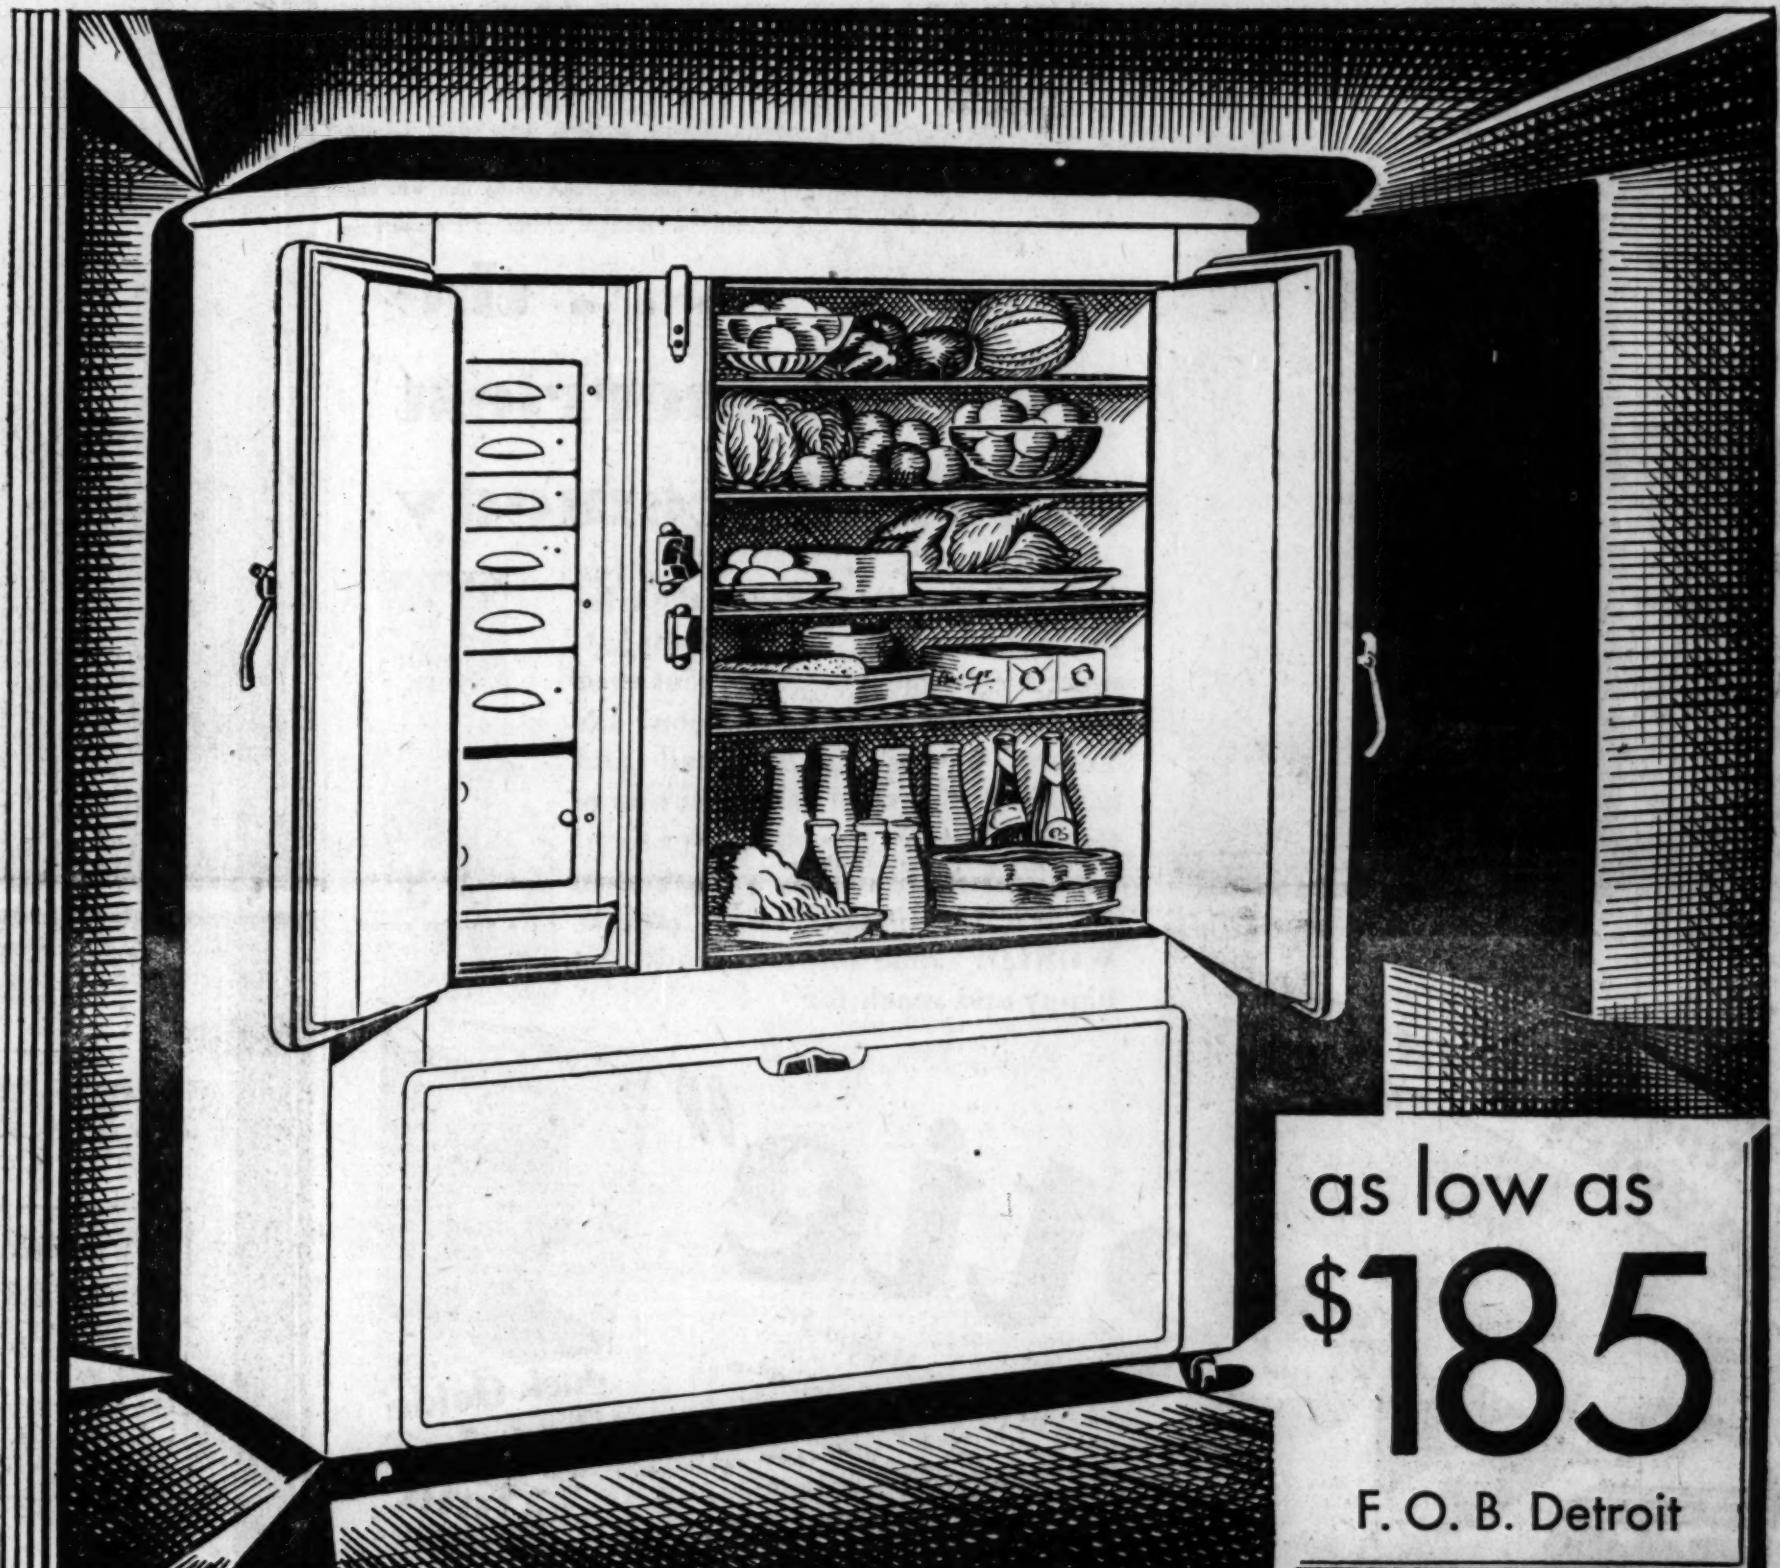

Not content with bringing you the finest automatic care of food and far faster freezing of ice cubes, Kelvinator surrounds this more efficient service with fresh beauty and sterling quality in cabinet construction.

New Metal Cabinets—Will Last a Life-time

Each new Kelvinator—and they are priced as low as $185, f.o.b. Detroit—is of rugged metal construction, porcelain-lined throughout to permit easy cleaning. Massive chromium-plated hardware in dull finish adds both to the attractive appearance and durability of these models. Larger models are equipped with separate cold storage chambers and are electrically lighted.

To know how much more value your refrigerating dollar now commands, see the new Super-Automatic Kelvinators on display at our showrooms. You will be surprised to learn how easily you may enjoy Kelvinator's many new conveniences immediately under the Kelvinator ReDisCo monthly budget plan.

Huskies Dine, Dance

Washington's Huskies stepped out of their roles as "grizzlies of the northwest" yesterday to be feminine charms. The Huskies were guests at a tea dance given to raise money for Chicago settlement work. It was held at the Reynolds club at the University of Chicago.

Later they met the Maroon team at dinner at Hutchinson common, where ends sat with ends, backs with backs, and so on. Coach A. A. Stagg, who had invited the Huskies to dine with their opponents of today, arose and told them that he expected the Huskies to hit just as hard in the game as if they'd never seen their opponents. "If football isn't hard—hard," he repeated the word, his voice becoming hard as he said it, "it isn't football."

BY HARLAND ROHM.

Chicago and Washington, disciples of different football religions in their methods of warfare, close their season's gridiron labors at Stagg field today. The Pacific coast lads depend primarily on the heavy artillery of a smashing attack, while Chicago-famed in the past for its straight football—hit it to attack from the air.

Although the Huskies rank as favorites, there is more than a little doubt in the minds of the west coast coaches and even the middle western experts on the result. The Maroons' brilliant passing against Illinois last Saturday, combined with a week's intensive work on variations of Stagg's famed "flanker pass" bring up the question whether the Huskies can score faster by ripping into the line than Chicago can by zooming passes.

Despite the color of the powerful Washington squad, Chicago football fans seem to be passing up the game. Last night only 13,000 of the 45,000 seats in the stadium were sold. Though the game has possibilities of being one of the hardest fought of the day, it is probable the stands won't be more than half filled at the kick-off.

Both teams took the usual light workouts yesterday.

Giants Battle at Center.

The battle between two of the biggest men in football at center, Capt. George and Weaver of Chicago, 6 feet 1 inch, 220, as added incentive yesterday. Both have difficulty sleeping in a bed of normal size, and both need two berths in a Pullman. The Shoreland hotel, where the Huskies have been staying in Chicago, bought a special bed for Jessup and yesterday they offered the bed to the winning team.

Naturally either Jessup or Weaver will get it and Weaver wants it greatly because he's forced to curl up in an ordinary sized bed in his fraternity house now. He'll try to make it uncomfortable for the Huskies in order to sleep in comfort from now on.

Huskies chief hope is Muskefford, a 182 pound, 6-foot-5 halfback, who weighs 180 pounds in 95 and is expected to follow George Wilson and Chuck Carroll into Washington's football hall of fame as an all-American as soon as his defensive play strengthens. He drives from behind a line averaging 187 pounds, though the Maroon line averages only 186 pounds less.

Watenberg Best Passer.

The Maroons' greatest hope is Ben Watenberg, who might be a hero of a boy's college story. Watenberg is bright and wears glasses at all times except when playing football.

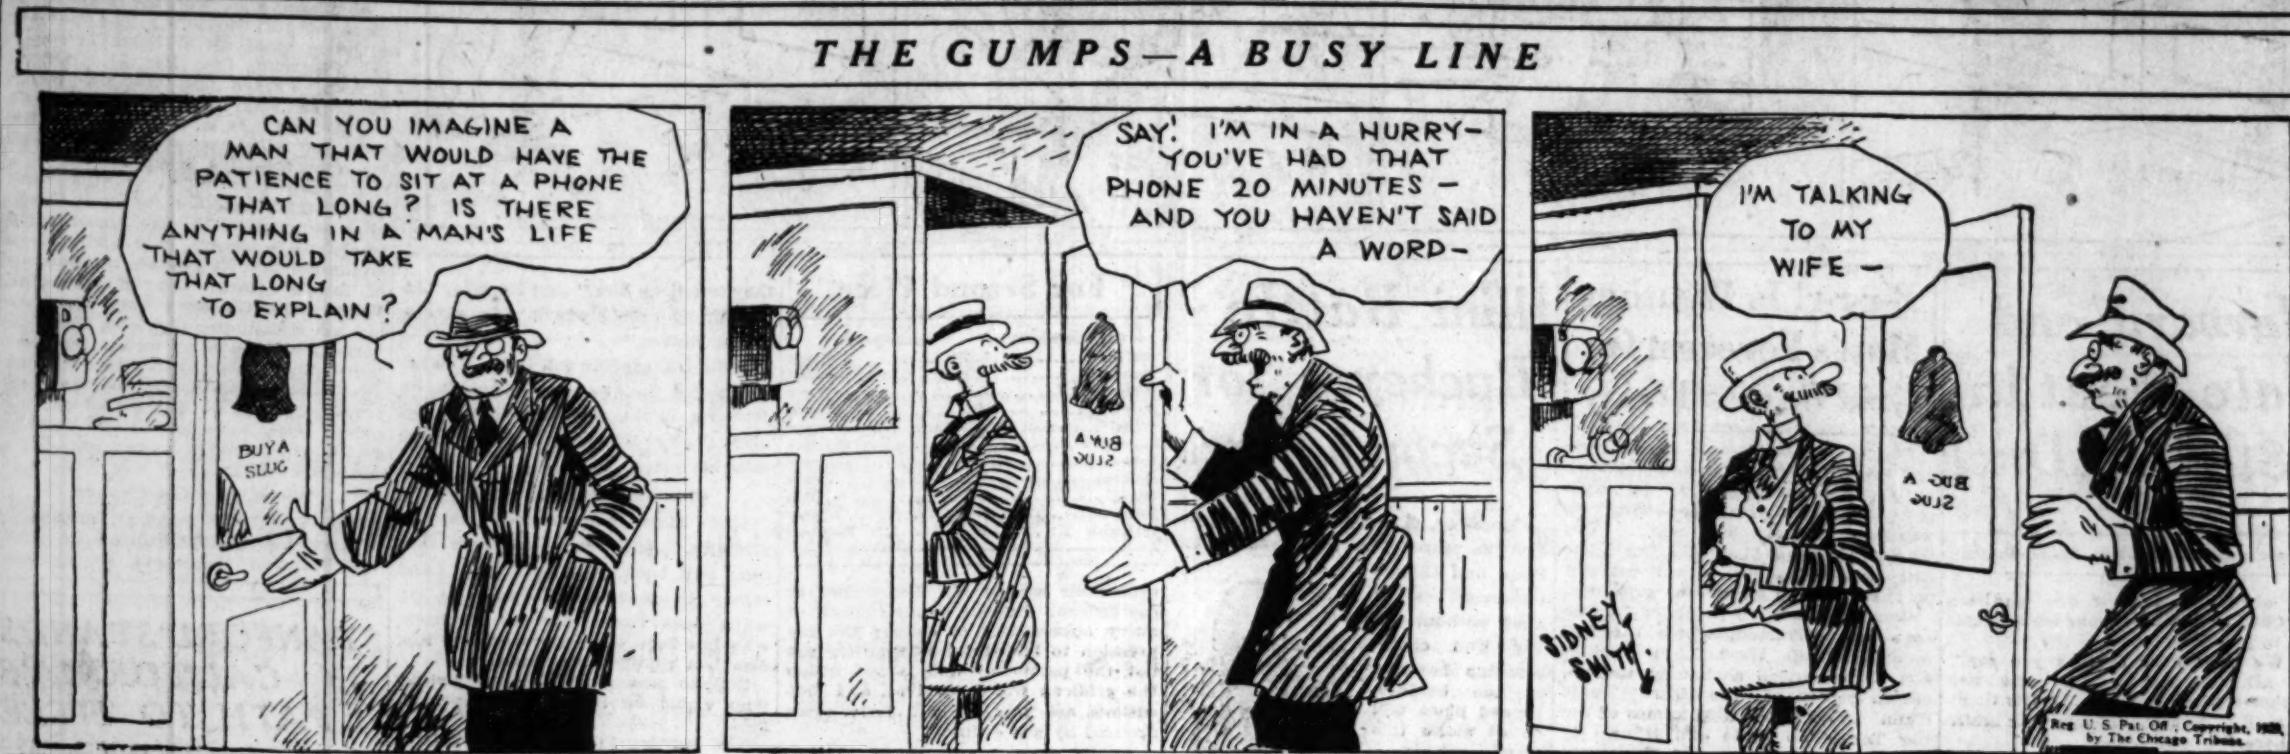

Declining to be discouraged by the handicap, he fought the odds of learning to throw a football accurately. As a junior last year he played with an iron mask to protect the glasses, but they clouded. So he discarded the glasses this year and "passes by ear." He sees a flying Maroon blur down the field in the spot where it should be and the pigskin slams through the air a little in advance of the blur. It sounds tricky and the Illini can tell you truly that it is, not only tricky but also effective.

FLETCHER QUILTS COACHING; SAYS FOOTBALL'S DYING

"No Discipline; Players Dislike Game."

Cleveland, O., Nov. 22.—(AP)—College football, hit recently by an exhaustive bulletin of the Carnegie Foundation, which accused it of a "spirit of professionalism," to-night faced another criticism in a statement by one of the greatest players of recent years, Coach Bob Fletcher of the Case School of Applied Science, that "only a few college players nowadays play the game because they like it."

Announcing his resignation as the Case coach today, to be effective after the Thanksgiving day game with Western Reserve university, Fletcher declared that "intercollegiate football is dying."

Football games will continue to draw big crowds for a few years, but the game will not hold the public, as the past, Fletcher said.

Teams Lack Discipline.

The former star quarter back of the University of Illinois declared there was "changed attitude" among college players of the last few years. "The younger of today cares more for the social life at college."

With a few exceptions, Notre Dame's outstanding, Fletcher said, college teams lacked discipline. He cited the weak showing of Michigan early this season as an example and said the recent improvement of the Wolverines was accounted for by discharging eight members of the team in order to have harmony on the squad.

Fletcher has been coach at Case since 1924. With several good seasons to his record, he faced even better prospects next year with almost an entire team of veterans.

MR. ZUPPKE'S EXPLANATION.

Columbus, O., Nov. 22.—[Special.]—If Bob Fletcher said that intercollegiate football is dying, some enthusiastic reporter probably caught him in a moment of despair, "Bob Zuppke, Illinois football coach, here for the game with Ohio State tomorrow, said when asked about a statement attributed to his former star player.

Dry and Dusty.

Dear Harvey: Just before the Purde-Iowa game the man back of me was singing the blues about the field being wet, when his wife said, "But wouldn't the players much rather have the field this way than dry and dusty?" Probably she had heard of eleven being dusted off.

Football Schedule.

Fewer important football games than usual are played tomorrow because many fixtures are reserved for Thanksgiving day. This is not true in the middle west, where the Big Ten years ago adopted a rule to close the season on the Saturday preceding Turkey day.

Purdue and Notre Dame.

Frequent wishes are heard here for a post-season contest between Purdue and Notre Dame, if the Boilmakers down Pat Page's Hoosiers tomorrow and Notre Dame takes Northwestern and Army. Even if Coaches Phelan and Rockne were willing after their already hard season and even if faculties of the two universities approved, there is a conference rule against such games.

HARVARD MEETS YALE IN 48TH GRID DUEL TODAY

Aibile Booth to Start the Game for Eli.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Boston, Mass., Nov. 22.—Harvard and Yale are playing their forty-eighth game of football in Cambridge tomorrow afternoon, and while there is much interest in the outcome, there seemed to be just as much interest this evening in the problem of living through to the finish.

The winter has closed in suddenly on Boston and large portions of the people who came here from temperate climates along the Atlantic seaboard have a premonition that unless they establish business relations with a source of supply for their flasks, the outcome of the football game will occur too late to be of any interest to them.

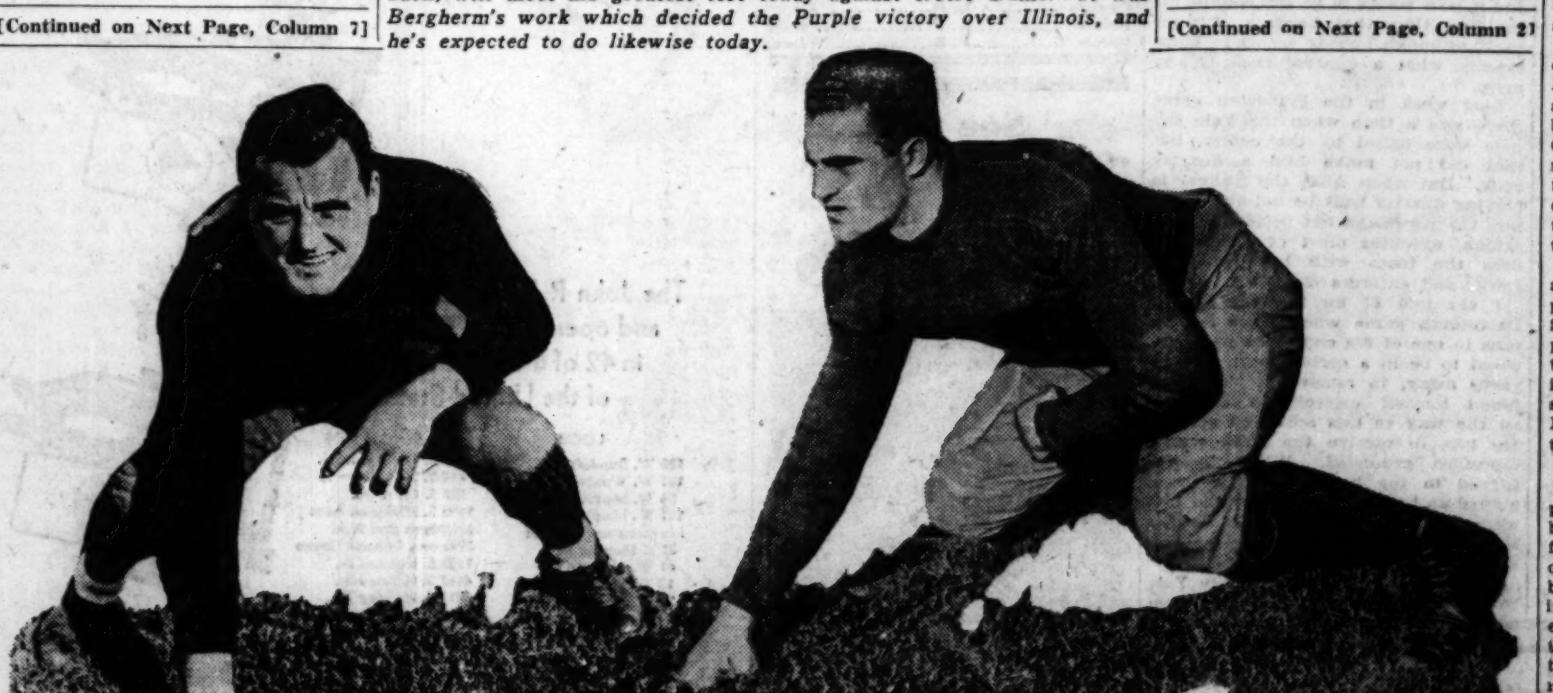

The football field was covered with a crust of half melted and refrozen snow this morning, and as it develops now that this crust is undisturbed, a series of canvas blankets which will be skinned off just before the game, leaving the field clear, though frozen and unyielding to the human form.

Coaches Wear Arctic Suits.

Mr. Will Bingham, the director of athletics of Harvard university; Mr. Arnold Horween, the head coach, and Mr. Duke Dunn, late of the University of Michigan, the line coach, were discovered sitting in a kind of native Bosomian igloo on the side lines at the start of the Harvard and Yale scrubs this afternoon, wearing the costume of the country, which is a series of arctic union suit lined with fur, and with the native New England goggles or gum boots on their feet, and the New England ear muffs, fastened something like the old fashioned photographer's head clamp, covering their ears.

MALONEY BEATS K. O. CHRISTNER BY LATE RALLY

Boston, Mass., Nov. 22.—(P.)—Jimmy Maloney, Boston heavyweight, defeated K. O. Christner of Akron, O., with a furious closing drive here tonight in the Boston garden's feature contest, a ten round affair. Maloney was behind the half way mark, but his solid body punches had the Ohio rubber worker in distress at the close. Maloney scaled 196 pounds. Christner met a slow thinking one punch man tonight at Madison Square garden, and, as usual, brains triumphed over brawn. Rene de Vos, the Belgian, taking a ten round decision from Harry Ebbets, the Freeport, L. I., blonde. De Vos thus set himself up as leading contender for Mickey Walker's
